Swing into Spring!

...with these fast-paced, super-realistic games from Sports Illustrated!

Here's a winning cure for spring fever

Superstar Baseball!

the exciting new game of strategy and tactics that lets you manage 96 of the greatest ballplayers of all time!

Just think of it! You call all the shots for stars like Mays and Mathewson, Clemente and Cobb, Aaron, Ruth, Koufax, Tris Speaker, Tom Seaver, Honus Wagner and more. We've "scouted" the 96 stars by computer—analyzing official game-by-game records of their careers. And we've converted all this information into easy-to-use Player Performance Cards that let you make all the moves—in the "front office" and right down on the field.

You put your own team together, set your lineup and batting order, call for the bunt, pinch-hit or steal. You can wave a runner on to try for an extra base, or send your starter to the showers and signal the bullpen for your ace reliever. You can even trade players, bring up replacements, build your own powerhouse club. Match the all-time NL greats against the AL and see which league really is best. Or pit the old-timers against the modern stars. Just imagine the dream teams you can field—the great man-to-man battles you can set up: Ruth vs. Koufax, Mays vs. Walter "Big Train" Johnson, Aaron vs. Cy Young. Or flash Ty Cobb the steal sign—and challenge the rifle arm of Johnny Bench!

Put yourself in the middle of all the super action—order SUPERSTAR BASEBALL! today.

Go for the Green!

—another great way to swing into spring!

SI has selected 18 great holes from such super courses as Merion, Baltusrol, Winged Foot, Augusta and Pebble Beach—and turned them into a golfer's dream course your whole family will enjoy playing.

The colorful course layout accurately depicts each great hole to scale—the tees, fairways, roughs, traps, trees, water hazards, greens, everything! The game's easy-to-play system lets you face every golf situation imaginable—as you drive, pitch, chip and putt your way around this challenging course. From tee to green you make all the decisions. You line up each shot, check your distance, figure how much club you'll need, then "let it fly!" Golfer or non-golfer you'll enjoy all the realistic action. So go for the coupon and order GO FOR THE GREEN! now.

Enjoy Track Meet!, too

TRACK MEET! It's like ten games in one! You pit seven of the world's greatest athletes (each an outstanding Olympic competitor or former World Record holder) against each other in the grueling Decathlon. From the USA—Bill Toomey, Rafer Johnson, Bob Mathias, Milt Campbell and the legendary Jim Thorpe; from Russia—Vasiley Kuznetsov; from Taiwan—C.K. Yang. You assess the strengths and weaknesses of each athlete and devise a strategy for winning. Should you play it safe in a particular event or go for the world record? Victory or defeat depends on you! Order TRACK MEET! today.

Sports Illustrated Games are available at all fine stores that carry april house® products. Ask for them by name. If you prefer, however, you may use this handy coupon to order games direct-by-mail from Sports Illustrated, Box 619, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10020.

STREET and SMITH'S OFFICIAL Yearbook

Baseball

35th Year

STREET and SMITH'S BASEBALL YEARBOOK, established in 1941, has been published every year since. Over the years reader response has been overwhelming, and what started out as a 96-page Yearbook gradually grew to 128 pages of solid baseball material, written by the nation's top baseball authorities. Our Yearbook is more Complete and Up-to-Date than any other baseball book sold.

Manage in the Majors with STRAT-O-MATIC BASEBALL

Play the original computer-programmed baseball game that puts you in the Manager's Seat in every Big League ballpark in the country.

Ever wonder why the experts do so poorly when it comes time to pick the Pennant winners every spring? It's because ballgames are decided by more than the "paper skills" of the players. Strategy and "breaks" often put a ballgame in the won or lost column. And that's the way we designed STRAT-O-MATIC. So players' abilities count heavily—but so does strategy and Lady Luck. You probably couldn't win a Pennant with the longshot San Diego Padres—but your daredevil managing might move them up higher in the standings than the experts predicted.

Like on the diamond, STRAT-O-MATIC begins when you make up your lineup. You know southpaw fastballer Mickey Lolich will be on the mound for Detroit against your Baltimore Orioles. Do you bench fence-bustin' portside Boog Powell and play the righty-lefty percentages by putting righty Earl Williams in your lineup? YOUR decision might mean the ballgame.

YOU CALL THE SHOTS

What do you do when the hitters begin to peck away at your tiring starting pitcher in the late innings? Maybe you should give him the hook with the heavy artillery on deck. But who do you bring in from the bullpen—the flame throwing rookie with the gaudy K record—or the wily vet who keeps the ball down and makes 'em hit it into the dirt? In tell you whether you made the right decision. Would you dare cross up the Mets by having slugger Willie Stargell lay down a bunt to spoil ace Tom Seaver's no-hitter? Or how about sending aging base thief Lou Brock to second with rifle-armed Johnny Bench behind the bat? Suicide? Did you ever think the Reds might get careless about holding Brock on because they're overconfident?

YOU REACT TO REAL GAME SITUATIONS

Exclusive STRAT-O-MATIC features for '75:

- Pitcher's stamina factor now computed into pitching records.
- Individual batter's performances computed against righty and lefty pitching.
- Each pitcher rated against both righty and lefty batters.

STRAT-O-MATIC, YOU'RE the manager. It's YOUR decision.

A good Big League Manager knows when to play his hunches—and when to play percentages. How about you? A roll of the dice will

You really have to manage in STRAT-O-MATIC—take charge. The bows for winning are all yours—and so are the raps for losing. Only STRAT-O-MATIC gives you this kind of on-field realism. It's not just a game of luck, or statistics (although no other game comes close to computing ALL the vital facts into their game). STRAT-O-MATIC is the game that's been getting fans involved in every element of Major League Baseball for 10 years.

THE ONLY GAME FOR FANS

If you love baseball, nothing but STRAT-O-MATIC will do. It can be played in a basic version for younger players. Or the no-plays-barred way that puts you right in the dugout with Weaver, Mauch, Houk, Alston and Berra. STRAT-O-MATIC...there's nothing like it this side of homeplate.

By Bob Addie

Columnist and vet Washington Post Sports scribe Bob Addie reviews the amazing stolen base record set by speedy Lou Brock in 1974.

Lou Brock

It was just after Lou Brock, of the St. Louis Cardinals had set a new base-stealing record of 105 on his way to 118 that his teammate, Bob Gibson, commented: "I suppose now we're going to see a lot of attempted steals in 1975."

This, indeed, could be The Year of the Big Steal. There is something glamorous about the stolen base and the artist who excels at it. Some people think baseball is boring but what can match the excitement of a noted stealer on base in the late innings when his team is a run behind?

If it's the home crowd, there is the "Go, Go, Go" chant. If the noted base-stealer is in an enemy town, every fan in the stands is out on that mound trying to keep the stealer close to the bag. Fans enjoy this cat-and-mouse game.

How about the World Series when Oakland's Herb Washington was picked off first base by the Dodgers' Mike Marshall? That made a classic story and will be remembered along with other great series events.

To refresh your memory, it was in the second game of the 1974 series when Washington, baseball's only "designated runner," was put in as a runner with one out in the ninth and the A's trailing, 3-2.

Washington was picked off for the second out and Angel Mangual struck out to end the game. What was intriguing about the incident was the duel between Marshall, who has a great pickoff move, and Washington, a 23-year-old rookie handpicked by owner Charlie Finley because of his speed. Another intriguing part of the story was that Marshall was Washington's instructor in one course at Michigan State University.

Washington took lessons from Maury Wills who, of course, had stolen 104 bases in 1962. Everybody said that like Babe Ruth's career home run total of 714, that record was unassailable. Anyway, it's interesting that Finley, a shrewd baseball man despite his eccentricities, should bring the thrill of base-stealing or running back into baseball with the acquisition of Herb Washington.

As young Washington admitted, after the celebrated pickoff, he had a lot to learn about base-stealing. But then, as he also pointed out, even Brock makes mistakes. How true.

It happened that I was covering the final weeks of the National League East Division involving the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cardinals down the home stretch. I got to see a good deal of Brock and his methods. In many ways his technique reminds me of George Case, the onetime Washington and Cleveland speedster.

Case made a career out of watching pitchers' moves and he had a highly-developed "safety zone." That is, he knew how much of a lead he could take from every pitcher in the league. Case led the American League in stolen bases five times and had a respectable career total of 349.

HERB WASHINGTON, A's designated runner, is picked off first base by MIKE MARSHALL in Game 2 of World Series.

Spurs Year of Big Steal

LOU BROCK swipes record 105th base on September 11 as Phil's shortstop LARRY BOWA takes throw too late.

Base-stealing can win a lot of games and it can lose some, too. Oddly, this was demonstrated on successive nights in that crucial series in the last week between the Cardinals and Pirates. Brock won a game with a late-inning steal. Then, on the next night, Pittsburgh was leading, 1-0, when Brock was on first base through a force play with one out and Ted Sizemore at bat. Brock stole second with no trouble and now was in scoring position.

But he tried to steal third and a great throw by Pirate catcher Manny Sanguillen and a great tag by third baseman Rich Hebner cut Brock down. As usually happens, Sizemore came through with a single that would have scored Brock. Why did Brock want to steal third?

"There are a lot of reasons," insisted Brock. "Running got us (the Cardinals) here. There is always the possibility of a bad throw and I could go home. It's happened. I obviously thought I could make it or I wouldn't have tried."

Regardless of all that, no one could blame Brock for trying to steal another base. He now is fourth on the all-time stolen base list behind Billy Hamilton with 937, Ty Cobb with 892 and Arlie Latham with 791. Brock has 753. I asked him: "Do you feel you have a chance to catch Ty Cobb?"

The 35-year-old Brock grinned and said: "I won't be around that long."

Maybe he will and maybe he won't. It is interesting to remember that Wills slumped to 40 stolen bases in 1963 after his record-breaking 104 the year before. Then he stole 53 in 1964 and seemed headed for a new mark in 1965 but he fell 10 short by stealing 94 bases. He never again approached that figure.

Another interesting sidelight is that Wills was 29 years old when he set his record of 104 and 32 when he stole 94. Brock stole 74 bases, his previous high, in 1966 when he was 27 but he seemed to get better with the years, strange as that may seem. Wills, by the way, stole 52 bases when he was 35 years old.

Brock is inclined to be modest about his accomplishments—although there is no doubt that he was disappointed in not getting the Most Valuable Player Award. "It's just a popularity contest (MVP Award), anyway," he said before the vote came out. The MVP Award was won by Steve Garvey, of the Dodgers, and it was Brock's misfortune that Garvey had such a great year.

Danny Murtaugh, Pittsburgh manager, was in Brock's corner for the MVP Award. "He has to get on base to steal," observed Murtaugh, "and he does that very well by hitting his way on. This guy is quite a hitter."

Murtaugh is correct. Brock batted .306 in 1974 and gave himself ample opportunity to exercise his base-stealing talents by getting 195 hits. He also drew 61 walks which was like giving up a double.

Brock is lefthanded all the way. That does give him that extra step to first base but he says he isn't as fast as he used to be. "I used to go down the line (to first base) in 3.4 or 3.5 seconds," he said, "but now it's more like 3.8 or 3.9."

Brock scored 105 runs during the year and that is another indication of how valuable the steal of second can be. Wills scored 130 runs when he set his record of 104 thefts so that means he translated most of his steals into runs—and that's what it's all about.

Cobb scored 2244 runs during his 24-year career, and nobody has ever touched him in that department. He also stands first on the all-time list in batting with .367 so his record 892 stolen bases had to come in great part through his hitting—the same as Brock.

There is nothing like a 1-2 punch in stealing bases. Brock not only set an individual record with his 118 stolen bases in 1974, he also set a new two-man record with Bake McBride for the same team with 148. Rookie McBride stole 30 bases. The previous mark was 136 by Clyde Milan (74) and Danny Moeller (62) of the 1913 Washington Sen-

MAURY WILLS was 29 years old when he set record 104 stolen bases in 1962 and three years later he swiped 94.

TY COBB, a tough man to keep off the bases due to .367 lifetime batting mark, stole 892 bases in career.

APBA MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL GAME

The Knowledgeable Fan's Choice

APBA is the table baseball game created expressly for the real baseball fan. We know from experience that the fan who understands the sport's intricacies and appreciates the unique, original quality of every single major league contest will also enjoy the realism of the APBA game. APBA enables you to replay a full major league schedule, complete with Championship Playoffs and World Series.

THE GAME } JUST LIKE REAL LIFE THE PLAYERS }

APBA features a thoroughly accurate reproduction of the performances of all categories of major leaguers, from power hitters like Jeff Burroughs and Mike Schmidt to power pitchers like Tom Seaver and Steve Carlton. This means, of course, that the APBA game must play precisely the way major league baseball is played—and that's just what APBA does.

You'll see the same sort of dramatic action you observe at major league ballparks: a rally-starting single by Rod Carew or Ralph Garr, a rally-killing double play executed by Bobby Grich and Mark Belanger, a game-winning homer by Reggie Jackson or Jimmy Wynn, a game-ending strikeout by Sparky Lyle or John Hiller.

No two games are ever the same with APBA, and you can count on every conceivable baseball play, from double steals to triple plays, occurring with realistic frequency. Occasionally you'll even have a game called for rain.

APBA MAKES YOU THE MANAGER

With APBA you can manage every one of the 24 Major League teams, and your managerial style will probably depend on the personnel on your ballclub. In managing the Cardinals, with speedsters like Lou Brock and Bake McBride, you'll very likely do more gambling on the basepaths than you will with the powerhouse Pirates, whose lineup includes Al Oliver and Willie Stargell. A reliable reliever like Rollie Fingers will tempt you to lift a struggling starter earlier than you might in the absence of a strong bullpen.

Sometimes player injuries, another realistic aspect of APBA, will reduce your available personnel. Injury-prone players like John Mayberry and Willie McCovey will be out of action from time to time. But an every-day player like Pete Rose will miss little or no action, and you can be sure iron-man reliever Mike Marshall will be ready when you need him.

Above is an exact size replica of the Johnny Bench player card, along with a portion of the Nolan Ryan card. These are only two of 480 such cards in the current edition of APBA baseball, and even more cards are optionally available. Used in conjunction with APBA's play result boards, these cards will produce a record amazingly similar to the respective real-life performances of Bench and Ryan.

Because each player in APBA is represented by an individual card, a number of options are available to you. You can play with actual intact major league teams, you can make trades, or you can even start from scratch by drafting teams and forming your own league. Each player can be relied upon to perform just as he did in the major leagues, no matter what kind of team he plays for. ©1975 ators. That was tied by Wills (104) and Willie Davis (32) of the 1962 Dodgers.

There are those who say that McBride one day will have a shot at Brock's record. McBride, 26, wears contact lenses and also earns his way on base with his hitting. Brock thinks that it's only a question of time when McBride will learn the pitchers' moves and know his own safety zone.

If you want a primer on Brock's technique on base-stealing, he says that it's important to know the opposing pitcher, his best pitch, his release, and his move to first. The St. Louis speedster insists that it gets tougher for him every year.

"Naturally," he explains, "I'm a marked man. The pitcher concentrates on holding me to the bag but it does ruin his concentration to be worrying about me all the time and forgetting the hitter."

It is an axiom in baseball that it's tough to steal on a lefthanded pitcher because he's facing first base and sometimes the fine line between a pickoff attempt and a balk escapes an umpire. But here, too, Brock is different. He says that not all southpaw pitchers have a good move to first. "If they can watch me," he reasons, "I can watch them."

That is true enough. Brock is smart enough to pick up a tip on what the pitcher, especially a southpaw, is going to do. The top base-stealers say that most of their success came from stealing on the pitcher and not the catcher. Not even the strongest arm in the world can cut down a fast man like Brock who has not only a big lead but the know-how.

Case always liked to come into the bag with a "standup slide." That is, he practiced sliding short and away from the bag and with one motion coming to his feet to be ready to go on to third. "When I first started out," Case once confided, "I was a raw rookie with raw speed. I used to make it to second base, all right, but many times, if the throw went wild, I couldn't take an extra base because I'd be flat on my back with a long slide. I practiced on cutting down that slide and coming up on my feet—ready to go."

Brock never saw George Case play but then the great craftsmen tend to do things the same way. Thus, the Cardinal stealer employs the same technique that Case did. He uses the short slide and pops up like a piece of toast.

The stolen base always has been a staple of baseball. Just as the screen pass is as old as football itself, so is the steal in baseball.

The late Clyde Milan used to like to reminisce about his career in stolen bases. Milan was known as "Deerfoot" back in the days when he roamed center field for the Senators.

In 1912, the first year Clark Griffith came to Washington, Milan was the regular center fielder. Milan broke in with Walter Johnson in 1907 and, like Johnson, never played for any other team but Washington. In 1912 Milan stole 88 bases and far outdistanced Cobb who had 61 that year. In 1913 Milan stole 75 bases and again was far ahead of Cobb who managed only 52 that year.

"In 1914," Milan once told me, "I beat Cobb again for the third straight time—although I slumped to 38 stolen bases while Ty had 35. You know, Ty never liked to lose at anything. I remember I met him shortly before the 1915 season and he told me: 'I'm going to start stealing bases again so watch out.' That was the year he stole an unbelievable 96 bases."

That record of 96 stood until 1962 when Wills set his own mark.

There have been many different types of base-stealers. Luis Aparicio, who led the American League in stolen bases for nine straight years, was the jackrabbit type with a quick start. Brock also employs a quick start and has speed to go with it.

Aparicio, a little man at 5-9 and two inches shorter than Brock, appeared to be going faster than he was. But Aparicio was a gifted slider and seemed to have an instinct as to where the ball was being thrown because he invariably slid out of the way of the tag.

Eddie Collins, the Hall of Famer, was a great baserunner and stealer. Collins, one of the first of the college men to invade baseball, was a 140-pound quarterback at Columbia University when he was discovered by Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics. Collins stole 743 bases during his career and 10 in World Series play. And twice he stole six bases in one game. Can you top that?

Perhaps his most famous stolen base occurred in the sixth game of the 1917 World Series when Collins played for the Chicago White Sox against the New York Giants.

Collins grounded to Heinie Zimmerman, Giants third baseman, who made a throwing error allowing Collins to get to second.

New York rightfielder Dave Robertson dropped Joe Jackson's fly ball allowing Collins to go to third. The next batter, Happy Felsch, hit the ball to the pitcher, Urban Faber. Collins expected Faber to go for the double play. Instead, Faber threw to Zimmerman at third. In the rundown, the plate was left unguarded and Collins "stole" home with the winning run.

The steal of home always has ranked as one of the most exciting plays in baseball. The late Jackie Robinson was a master at stealing home. He did it 19 times in his brilliant career with the Dodgers and also in the first game of the 1955 World Series against the Yankees.

Robinson was something to see on the base paths. He taunted the pitcher, not with words, but with daring leads. Many times it was a battle between the pitcher and Robinson with nobody paying any attention to the batter.

Robinson was a money base-stealer. That is, he

Here is an excerpt on our game which was printed in a copy of

ZENITH EXPRESS

By JULIEN MAXWELL

Statis-Pro Major League Baseball ("Statis-Pro" is their brand name at Midwest) is the professional baseball game and, if anything, it is more specific, more accurate, and more complex than SI's. Again, each player is represented by his own card but there are countless elaborations and options such as an outfielder's throwing ability to be consulted in time of great gamestress.

If you don't have a fairly sophisticated knowledge of the game and standard baseball percentage play, you won't get the fullest enjoyment possible. Batters' performances change in "clutch" situations, as do defensive performances—and a pitcher's performance changes for better or worse the longer he stays in the game.

The alternatives are almost surreal and the result is a game of nothing less than geometrical precision, full of virtually every complexity baseball is heir to. This game, once mastered, is unquestionably the most accurate board-game representation of major league baseball ever created. If you don't have a near perfect understanding of the most complex of all team sports, you sure as hell will by the time you learn to play this one properly. Magnificent.

James Barnes, who has toured the country doing TV talk shows and demonstrating the Statis-Pro games, is the genius behind this outfit. You've got to see the newspaper and play the games to believe them. Believe me.

Here is your chance to manage actual Major League players.

You as a table top manager select the starting lineups that you desire and place the teams on the special playing chart which has spaces for the home and visiting teams and also starting pitchers.

Not only is every pitcher rated for his durability and ability to control a game, but also for his performance in wild pitches and balks. Every pitcher is different in the game and each will finish close to the actual number of games he completed in a season.

Your hitters will not only bat for the real average, but also get the right number of doubles, triples and home runs and show you two speeds . . . one when trying to steal a base and another while running on base.

Sometimes, unusual plays will come up, such as a protest. It might happen once or never in your season, but it is possible.

Each team has 25 players, including ten pitchers, and each player is on a separate card and each team has a team envelope:

BILL NORTH, 114 stolen bases in four years, protests out call at 3rd base as Angels' Bob Oliver returns ball to Nolan Ryan.

DAVE LOPES, Dodgers' speedster, swiped 59 bases last season, surpassed only by Lou Brock.

rarely ever attempted it unless his run meant the ball game, then watch out. Jackie stole only 197 bases in his career but, like those 19 steals of home and the one in the World Series, he made them all count.

The late Gil Hodges once said that the least appreciated part of baseball was stealing bases. As Gil often pointed out, speed was essential but it wasn't everything.

In his book, "The Game of Baseball," Crown Publishers, Gil says: "To me, the best example of a base-stealer with base speed was Maury Wills. Wills could run but when we were teammates on the Dodgers there were three or four guys on the club who could beat him in a race but none was a better base-stealer. Wills is the best I ever saw and that includes Lou Brock who rates a close second."

Of the active players, no one can overlook Bert Campaneris, of the Oakland A's. Campy is a base-stealer in the mold of Aparicio. He's quick, he's fast and he's smart.

Tommy Harper is an example of tremendous speed harnessed to base-stealing. Willie Davis, recently traded to the Texas Rangers by the Montreal Expos, still can steal a base at 35 and after 15 years in the majors. Davis is another one who earns his way to first because he is a good hitter (.295 batting average in 1974 with 84 rbi's).

Joe Morgan, of the Reds, is another all-around performer who can steal the clutch base. The Yankees are getting a good one in Bobby Bonds, too, because he can hit with power and he can steal a few bases. He stole 41 bases with the Giants last year but Brock, of course, dwarfed all others with his record 118.

Among the relative newcomers such as Oakland's Bill North, there could be another Brock. North led the American League with 54 stolen bases in 1974 and he also had 141 hits. Bobby Tolan was a threat on base until he got hurt and his production was cut away down.

Dave Lopes, the whippet-like infielder of the Los Angeles Dodgers, already has made his mark as a base-stealer. Lopes came to the Dodgers in 1973 after having led the Pacific Coast League with 48 stolen bases playing for Albuquerque. He came up briefly with the Dodgers in 1972 and stole four bases in 11 games.

In 1973 the Dodger speedster won himself a regular job and his 36 stolen bases were part of the reason. He did even better in 1974, with 50 thefts.

In another year, in another time, that could have won him the National League title but last year was the Year of the Brock.

We spoke of Herb Washington a while ago. He stole 28 bases as a designated runner last year but how about teammate Reggie Jackson? He stole 25 while also contributing 29 home runs and 93 rbi's.

Mickey Mantle always was considered the complete ballplayer and his base-stealing record of 153 is entirely respectable when one considers the "bad wheels" the Yankee slugger had to struggle with for his whole career.

In looking back, there could not have been a greater player in the game than Ty Cobb who took time out to establish the modern base-stealing record along with his many other accomplishments. The fascinating thing about Cobb is that he stole home 34 times in his career.

There is no doubt that the stolen base gives baseball an extra fillip. Maybe the fans get bored with the home run. Maybe the designated hitter isn't the answer. But the stolen base still is exciting, from Cobb to Brock, and let's hope it continues to be.

But isokinetics has been proven superior to weight training for building your strength, your body, and your explosive power. . . faster and more effectively than ever possible before. Here's why:

During each Isokinetic exercise, you continually change the "weight" to the amount that your muscles need for fastest maximum development. (With a barbell you can't change the weight until after the exercise.)

"Sounds great," you say, "So how do I get started, and how much is it going to cost me?"

Until now, the only isokinetic exercisers available were complicated machines costing from $120 to over $4000. But NOW! A NEW invention, amazing in its beautiful simplicity, puts isokinetic muscle building within your reach for only a few dollars.

Powerex = Isokinetics

The invention is POWEREX! It is a pure isokinetic exerciser designed to give you the ultimate benefits of muscle, strength, and explosive power in a hurry. And, as you know, with these benefits come the added benefits of confidence, virility, and the outgoing personality that enables you to get along well with others of both sexes.

POWEREX is going to do all this for you through the following isokinetic principles:

- 1) POWEREX builds your muscles through their full range of movement. It works every small muscle fiber to its utmost. Not the grunt-and-groan partial static results of an isometric gadget, but the total dynamic power of isokinetics!
- 2) POWEREX has the exclusive CONTROL GRIPS. You instantly and smoothly change the amount of "weight" working for you, to the maximum your muscles can handle . . . from zero to hundreds of pounds, quickly building your

Changing the weight resistance at any instant during the exercise??? Without stopping to do it??? Yes!...this is the isokinetic principle, which builds your body to athletic proportions faster than any other method! Your POWEREX isokinetic exerciser is shown adding the inches of chest and arm muscle in a "bench press"...but without expensive bench, weight stand, and weights!

(Patent Pending)

RESULTS FAST—HERE'S PROOF!!

Some researchers conducted a scientific experiment and published the results in a leading medical journal. It showed that the average peak strength improvement, after only eight weeks, for each type of exercise was:

Isokinetics	47.2%
Weight training	28.6%
Isometrics	12.1%

Another group of researchers stated that all published research matching isokinetics with weight training and isometrics showed that isokinetics is greatly superior for muscle building.

"I am a weight lifter of eight years. However, after using the Powerex just once, I sold all of my weights!" James Hinson, Jr., NC.

"Gained 20 lbs, increased arms 2½ inches, chest 3 inches, reduced waist 2 inches. Look and feel a lot better." Joseph Moreno, CA.

"In the short time I have been using the Powerex, I have put over an inch on my arms, 2 inches on my chest, and gained 21 lbs." Scott Carterette, CA.

"You aren't just another rip-off company . . . you back what you say." T Roeklin, WI.

"Before, I was known as a singles hitter. This past season I was a home run hitter and I credit Powerex with this." Alabama.

"I reduced my waist 3", increased my arms 1½ inches, chest 2½ inches. Powerex has been the greatest!" D. Owens, MA.

"Easy to use, easy to store! Good program, no frustrations or unnecessary holdups as with a weight program." J. Hanna, PA.

"After only two weeks, I am dead-lifting 450 lbs, bench pressing 240 lbs, and squatting with 400 lbs. I'm glad that I invested the $13.95!" Richard Oxer, MT.

body into a classic, powerful machine!

Illustrated Wall Chart, Courses

POWEREX is safe and light, two pounds. POWEREX is compact, quick and easy to use, anytime, anywhere. At no extra cost, you also get a big 20x28 inch wall chart with illustrations and instructions. Several courses are described . . . for increased strength, bigger muscles, or turning fat into muscle. One course takes only 15 minutes a week.

Money-back Guarantee

The parts and workmanship are guaranteed for one full year from date of purchase.

AND: If you are not satisfied with your POWEREX for any reason whatsoever, just send it back within 14 days of receipt for an immediate full refund of your money. . . no questions asked.

Finally, the best part is that POWEREX will cost you only $11.95 (plus $2 for postage and handling)! Right! For less than 1/10th the cost of the next inexpensive isokinetic exerciser on the market, the benefits of isokinetic muscle building are yours!

So don't wait another moment . . . fill out the coupon, write your check or money order, and get it in the mail now. The sooner you do, the sooner you receive your POWEREX and start the isokinetic way to a muscular body and dynamic power!

Longest Games

In a 25-inning game that started at 8:08 PM on Sept. 11 and ended at 3:15 AM Sept. 12, the St. Louis Cardinals nipped the New York Mets 4-3 after seven hours and four minutes, setting the record longest night game ever in time and innings.

Veteran umpire Ed Sudol, who never left the field while working the plate in the marathon, has been the plate umpire in the three longest games time-wise in National League history.

First came the 23-inning day-game between the Mets and San Francisco Giants on May 31, 1964 that took seven hours and 23 minutes. It was the second game of a doubleheader which ran nine hours and 52 minutes, the longest doubleheader in history. Less than one month later, June 21, 1964, he was plate umpire again when Philadelphia's Jim Bunning pitched a perfect no-hitter against the Mets—naturally at Shea Stadium.

Four years later, on April 15, 1968, Sudol was the plate arbiter for the longest 1-0 game in history. The Mets also were involved, losing in 24 innings in Houston's Astrodome, in a night affair that lasted six hours and six minutes.

In last year's game, Sudol was hit seven times—only once in the chest and arm and once a foul took his mask off.

Was there any similarity in all three games? Ed says, "In each game, it seems after the 20th inning, you get your second wind and don't care how long it goes. Sudol added: "When I work in New York, I stay with my mother in Passaic, N.J. My brother came to the game and stayed throughout. On our way home, we stopped for a bowl of soup and before I went into the diner, I had to walk around the parking lot for 20 minutes to get rid of leg cramps. We got home at 5 AM.

MAJOR DETAILS

Umpire Ed Sudol called every pitch to a record total of 202 batters and it's assumed he called around 700 pitches. Mets coach Rube Walker, who charts every pitch his hurlers throw in every game, reported that six Met hurlers threw 331 pitches. Cardinals do not keep records past the starters.

Lou Brock got one hit in nine at-bats but was thrown out trying to steal No. 106 of the season.

Ken Reitz' two-run homer with two outs off Jerry Koosman, triggered the record marathon into five more hours of extra innings. The Cardinals' winning run in the 25th inning was unearned. Bake McBride got on with a single. When Mets pitcher Hank Webb threw wild on a pick-off attempt, McBride sprinted all the way home and was called safe by umpire Sudol on catcher Ron Hodges' error.

Mets' catcher, Duffy Dyer, caught 23 innings without setting a record. RECORDS SET: Most batters facing pitcher, Mets 103—Most at-bats, two teams, 175—Most batters facing pitcher, two teams, 202—Most left on base, two teams, 45—Most appearances at plate, 12, Felix Millan and John Milner, Mets—Longest errorless game, second base, 25 innings, Felix Millan, Mets and Ted Sizemore, Cardinals.

The classic long game is the 26-inning 1-1 tie between the Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves, May 1, 1920 at Braves field. The pitching duel between Leon Cadore, Brooklyn curve ball artist, and Joe Oeschger, Braves' fastball ace, was halted after three hours and 50 minutes by umpire Barry McCormick because of darkness.

SOME GEMS ALONG THE DIAMOND TRAIL

Al Kaline pulled off his Tiger uniform for the last time on Oct. 2, 1974, eight days after collecting his 3000th hit, and wrapped up a 22-year career (1953-1974), rivaled only by the immortal Tiger, Ty Cobb.

Kaline, who finished with a total of 3007 hits, was the 12th man in major league history to reach 3000 in his career. Nine of the 12 are already in the Baseball Hall of Fame—the other three are not yet eligible because of the five-year non-participation rule.

Kaline's career totals are—2834 games, 10,116 at bats, 1622 runs, 3007 hits, 498 doubles, 75 triples, 399 home runs, 972 extra base hits, 4852 total bases, 1583 runs batted in and .297 batting average.

Fran Healy, Royals' fleet (a rarity) catcher, stole 16 bases last season, giving him the highest total by a major league catcher since Frank Pytlak of the Indians, who also stole 16, 37 years ago. Ray Schalk, White Sox, holds AL record with 30, in 1916, Roger Bresnahan, Giants, set NL record with 25 in 1906.

On July 30, 1966, veteran White Sox southpaw Gary Peters, threw only 75 pitches, of which 50 were strikes, in a three-hit shutout of the Yankees. The next day, when Red Faber, the Hall of Famer, was present for Old Timers Day, he claimed that he held the mark at 67 pitches in a nine-inning game. "As I recall it" said Faber, "Walter Johnson threw only 71 pitches while beating the Reds 6-1 (May 22, 1912) and I broke that record against Boston. I had three innings when I threw only three pitches.

Billy Williams, former Cubs slugging star, reports to the A's with a .296 career batting average, 392 homers and 1354 RBI. Ironman Williams also holds the NL record for most consecutive games played, 1117, not missing one game for seven years until troubled by an ankle injury late last season.

Ted Martinez of the Mets, tied a record as a pinch-hitter against the Phillies last September 25, when he hit into a double play, then stayed in the game and hit into two more.

When the Twins left five men on base in their 2-1 loss to the Rangers October 2, last year, they set an AL record total of 1263 runners stranded during the season, one more than the 1971 Orioles.

Cardinals' long-time ace, Bob Gibson, reaching the 3000-strikeout plateau by striking out Cesar Geronimo of the Reds July 21 last season, became the first NL pitcher to do so. Only the immortal Walter Johnson, who fanned 3508 batters, surpasses Gibson's career total of 3057.

By drawing 16 walks in their 17-inning, 7-3 win over the Phillies last season, the Cardinals fell one short of the NL record held jointly by the Cubs of 1887, the 1903 Dodgers and the 1944 Giants.

On July 30, last year, Cubs righthander Bill Bonham, became the 13th hurler in major league history to strike out four batters in one inning. Bonham fanned Expos' Mike Torrez to start the second inning, but Torrez got to first on a passed ball by catcher Rich Stelmazek. Bonham then whiffed Ron Hunt, Tim Foli and Willie Davis in order.

Rangers' Jeff Burroughs, had a shot at one of the oldest records on the books. He had driven in runs in 10 consecutive games until Twins' Bert Bly-

AL KALINE is shown above as a 21-year-old Tiger rookie in 1953 and at end of career last season. On hand for his 300th hit celebration at Tiger Stadium last Sept. 2, were his wife Louise and sons Mark, 17 and Mike, 12. In the background (left to right) is Billy Rogell, former Tiger shortstop, now a member of Detroit City Council, Bob Levin, president of City Council and Tiger owner John E. Fetzer.

In the American League, where the city with the biggest park (Cleveland) is in a constant struggle to draw a million customers and where the smallest park (Boston) never misses, the ingredients seem to be present this season to cut heavily into the National League's annual turnstile championship. The N.L. drew nearly 4 million more at the gate in '74, but you can bet against the difference being that great this time, and not merely because of Frank Robinson and Catfish Hunter.

First off, Henry Aaron won't be playing those farewell appearances which clearly swelled National League attendance last year. Instead, it will be the first time around for Henry in the American. The Designated Hitter made it possible, and Aaron returns to his old Braves' homestead at age 41 for another year . . . maybe two . . . with the Milwaukee Brewers. Some feel that he alone will be responsible for a million of whatever increase the American League shows above the 13,027,645 drawn in '74.

But the A.L. didn't stop there.

The interleague trading box score was not complete with the end of this winter's annual meetings in New Orleans because the two major leagues adopted a renewal of the interleague trading period for the last 15 days of March. But when spring training began, the National League was clearly behind in the winter exchange of those in the superstar category. Along with Aaron went Bobby Bonds, Billy Williams, Willie Davis, Lee May, and Nate Colbert to the American, all of whom are well known for their power. From these quite likely will come the league's 1975 home run champion.

Last year's king of the long ball was Chicago's Dick Allen, who hit 32 homers, none in the last six weeks. Allen "retired" on Sept. 14, then let it be known he wasn't serious, and was traded to Atlanta for a token amount of cash and possibly a player-to-be-named later.

As for Catfish Hunter, his switch to the Yankees unquestionably will boost attendance in New York. With or without Hunter, the A's simply weren't drawing in Oakland. New York should pack 'em in at Shea when the Catfish goes to the mound, and if his club doesn't win the Eastern Division title it can only be from something going wrong elsewhere in the Yankee machinery. They failed by only two games last year, and you can imagine the disappointment in Baltimore when Hunter chose the Yankees in his celebrated $3.7 million jump.

Until the arbitrator's ruling that freed Hunter from Oakland and led to his subsequent signing with the Yanks, Baltimore seemed to have improved its club more than anyone in the East and figured it was well-equipped to repeat. True, the Orioles lost perhaps the biggest longtime American League star of all the trades when they peddled Dave McNally, a four-time World Series performer, to Montreal. McNally had asked for a scenery change, but the Orioles got Ken Singleton and Mike Torrez for him and also sacrificed some youth to obtain Slugger Lee May from Houston.

It all added up to what should be a two-team race for the Eastern championship. Out West? Well, some feel that this could be the end of the Oakland dynasty. Hunter, the Cy Young winner who was 25-12 for the A's, was vital, they say to Charlie Finley's slogan aimed at a fourth World's title: "Keep it alive in '75."

With Davis added to the Rangers and youngsters coming of age under Billy Martin, Texas looms as the club most likely to overtake the A's. The White Sox, stronger down the middle than they've been in years with the addition of youth, are capable of challenging, too, especially if—as many insist—they'll be a closer knit group without Allen.

How much of an impact Frank Robinson will have at the gate is something that only the season will tell. In becoming the game's first Black major league manager, Frank came into a tough spot. He has a club dependent perhaps too much on Pitchers Gaylord and Jim Perry, both of whom had outstanding years while the Indians finished eight under .500 and 14 games from the top.

The two teams which finished behind the Indians last year in the East were Milwaukee and Detroit. Both seem more improved than Cleveland, pretty much of a stand-pat ball club despite the efforts of GM Phil Seghi and the somewhat frustrated Robinson to get something going in the trade department. Everybody wanted Gaylord and the Indians said no. But isn't that what they have to do, even if they are obliged to sacrifice a good year by Perry elsewhere?

Cleveland fans, then, are expecting a lot from Robinson; New Yorkers from Hunter; Milwaukeeans from Aaron.

Somewhere there will be happiness.

NEW YORK YANKEES

Even without Catfish Hunter in their midst, the Yankees had to be taken seriously among the Eastern Division favorites this season—if only through the addition of Bobby Bonds. With Hunter theirs, free and clear, this club had to rank as the winter-book choice by a clear margin, and Yankee competitors began looking around for other things to happen that might neutralize what Hunter will do for the New York mound staff.

Will Sparky Lyle, for instance, finally slip into a rut after three years of superlative relief pitching? Will Bonds do no more for the Yankees than he did for the Giants last year, a season regarded by most as a mere slump? Will newcomers Larry Gura, Mike Wallace, and Rudy May come back to earth—or did the Yankees pick them up last year at precisely the right moment? Was Graig Nettles' early home run surge a fluke or something he can sustain all year?

The possibilities on this ball club are frightening, and if General Manager Gabe Paul comes up with anymore deals in the new interleague period or indeed until the regular trade deadline June 15, he could repeat as the major league executive of the year.

In taking Gura off the hands of the Rangers last summer, Paul sent him to Syracuse, where he was 7-7 and rarely walked anybody. Needing a lefty for the varsity, the Yanks brought Larry up and he responded with a 5-1 mark down the stretch and a 2.41 ERA, walking only 11 without intent in 56 innings. At 26, the Cubs gave up on Gura after the '73 season. The Angels had been trying to dump Rudy May for a long while, too. The Yankees took him on, and he southpawed an 8-4 mark for them and 2.28 in a partial season. They got Wallace from the Phils and he went 6-0 for them after a brief freshener at Syracuse. His ERA: 2.41 in relief despite spotty control.

With two 19 game winners in Pat Dobson, a re-tread, and George (Doc) Medich, a scholarly sophomore; with Lyle's 1.66, nine wins, and 15 saves, and with Dick Tidrow improved also in new surroundings at 11-9, one may wonder if Manager Bill THURMAN MUNSON, plagued by injuries last season, hit only .261 with 13 homers, but should do better in 1975.

Virdon had any great need to add Hunter to his staff. They were talking about the chances of 21-year old Scott McGregor, International League All-Star, making the club, too, after a 13-10 season at Syracuse. But it's going to be overcrowded on the Yankee staff, especially if veteran Mel Stottlemyre, 33, comes back from an injury-plagued 6-7.

The Yankee charm that seemed to turn ordinary players into good ones last year went further than the pitching staff. Case in point: Sandy Alomar. The Angels used Alomar in 46 games before peddling his .222 average to the Yankees, who needed some better glove work at second base. They got more than that. In 76 games for the Yankees, Sandy batted .269 and even hit a home run.

Chris Chambliss was acquired from Cleveland in a deal that was unpopular for a time with New Yorkers because it swept out a number of pitchers. Chambliss' debut was less sensational (.243), but Paul has great hopes for this first baseman who was his rookie of the year at Cleveland four years earlier. The rest of the infield has Jim Mason at short-stop, backed up by veteran Gene Michael; Nettles at third base. With Bill Sudakis traded away, the Yanks added infielder Eddie Leon from the White Sox in an even swap for reliever Cecil Upshaw. Bob Oliver, who used to hit home runs when he played regularly, made two stops last season, and the Yanks added him this winter to make it three. He's another all-purpose utility player, who can play first if they want to platoon Chambliss, a lefthanded hitter and righthanded thrower.

Yankee catching is among the very best. Thurman Munson, who demands respect from base runners, batted .261 and hit 13 homers despite periods of physical trouble, and freshman Rick Dempsey caught 31 games as a capable backup man.

Outfielders are stacked heavily in New York's favor, three of them batting .300 last season, although Ron Blomberg is better described as a designated hitter. Lou Piniella and Elliott Maddox were two who came from elsewhere during the previous winter and spring as Paul began raiding other rosters. Piniella hit .250 for Kansas City in 1973; vaulted to .305 as a Yankee. Maddox came from .238 at Texas to .303 for New York. Roy White batted .275 and sees himself playing less and less with the intrusion of Bonds, who—if he follows custom—will shake off his .256 mark at San Francisco and hit better for Virdon. Bobby had been averaging 31 homers a year until he slipped to 21 in '74. Bobby can run, too, and that gives the Yankees a new threat. He's stolen over 40 in five of his six big league seasons, 41 last year.

Alex Johnson was another late acquisition in the summer of '74, and the only rookie with any chance is Terry Whitfield, who probably needs another year to cut down his strikeouts after hitting 17 homers for Syracuse.

BALTIMORE ORIOLES

Just when it seemed the Orioles had improved themselves to a degree that would make them easily the repeating champion of the American League East, along came Catfish Hunter to join their major challenger, the New York Yankees. But regardless of Hunter's contribution to the Yanks, there can be no denying that Baltimore, too, will be a better club in 1975.

Oriole improvement is centered on the trades that brought them Lee May, Ken Singleton, and a pitcher they feel can offset the absence of Dave McNally, Mike Torrez.

It was a struggle for Baltimore to prevail over New York by two games last year. The club didn't have a .300 hitter, and there was a definite power shortage, with Boog Powell reduced to 12 home runs; Earl Williams to 14. Indeed, had it not been for Tommy Davis, the designated hitter (.289 and 84 RBI), a whole lot of good pitching might have gone down the drain. But Baltimore's pitching was second only to that of the World Champion A's, and its defense was the best in the league. It was from these important ingredients that a fourth championship in six years somehow was stirred together.

McNally had sought to be traded after 12 years with the Orioles, and while satisfying his demands they came up with a package that most observers felt was better than they gave away. In 1973, Singleton had a great year with Montreal, batting .302, hitting 23 homers, and driving in 103 runs. Last year he slumped to .276, nine, and 74 in these departments but blamed it on a sore wrist that he jammed while sliding in July. The wrist is okay now, and it's the 1973 Ken Singleton the Orioles hope they acquired. He's 27 and a switch-hitter. Right field is what they have in mind for him, although he can't be expected to improve upon Oriole defensive figures out there.

May should provide even more power and run production than Singleton. He, too, dipped from his usual statistics last season, batting .268, belting 24 homers, and knocking in 85 runs. Although less than his customary totals, the homers and RBI would have been good enough to lead the Orioles in 1974. May will play first base, leaving Powell homeless in all probability.

The Orioles failed in their Winter efforts to trade Powell, and they were willing also to deal Earl Williams, who fits the picture excellently as a catcher but doesn't like the job. Instead, Elrod Hendricks, and Andy Etchebarren handled the assignment through most of the stretch despite anemic batting marks.

Another obstacle overcome by the Orioles in their title drive last year was the arm injury to Jim Palmer, who came back to his former effectiveness in the nick of time. Jim wound up winning only seven games, losing a dozen, yet turned in an earned run average well within the characteristic Baltimore custom: 3.27. Mike Cuellar, 22-10 with five shutouts and a 3.11, and Ross Grimsley, 18-13 with four shutouts and a 3.07, shared the "ace" role on a talent-laden staff.

Torrez, 15-8 for the Expos, figures to fit in immediately as the fourth starter alongside Palmer, Cuellar, and Grimsley. Torrez, 28, is four years younger than McNally, and his earned run average, never sensational, should find improvement with the Oriole defense behind him. Doyle Alexander, 24, rates as the other rotation starter although he was a disappointing 6-9 in 30 starts last year.

Manager Earl Weaver's bullpen is headed by Grant Jackson (12 saves, 6 wins) and Bob Reynolds (7 of each). Don Hood and Jesse Jefferson are ready to move into more prominence after winning a game apiece. Wayne Garland was 5-5 starting and relieving, Dave Johnson was 2-2, and if there are any other hurlers knocking at the door, the Orioles aren't advertising them.

You wonder how long Brooks Robinson can go on showing his greatness. Last year he batted .288 in 153 games, and at age 37 this was his best average in 10 years. He's not hitting the long ball anymore, but his fielding was brilliant again, second only to Milwaukee's sensational Don Money. Third base, then, continues to be all Brooks. Mark Belanger, the perpetual Golden Glover, sees no intrusion at short. Neither does Bobby Grich at second. Weaver would like to see something better than .263 out of Grich, and maybe he will with the addition of sock below him in the batting order.

With Singleton in the outfield, Al Bumbry will have to show a rebound from his weak sophomore season at the plate to get the playing time his .337 rookie campaign of '73 indicated he'd have. He slumped to .233 last year, but a comeback would only brighten the Oriole picture in the outfield, where Don Baylor and the veteran Paul Blair likely will join Singleton. Blair hit .261 and fielded a ton in center. Baylor hit .272.

Tim Nordbrook, widely sought by others, and Doug DeCinces could stick as infielders after capping five minor league seasons with impressive years at Rochester.

MILWAUKEE BREWERS

The Brewers had the youngest regular in the American League last year in Robin Yount, who didn't turn 19 until the season was nearly over. This year they're going to have the oldest as well. He, of course, is Hank Aaron—back to close his major league career where he started it 21 years earlier.

Whether or not the presence of Aaron serves to boost the Brewers into the Eastern Division race, one thing appears certain. He should hypo the attendance at County Stadium and send it back over a million. Last year, the Brewers drew 955,741 without him and indeed without a .500 ball club.

There were genuine reasons for Milwaukee's failure to stay in contention in 1974, not the least of which was the nightmarish knee problem which Jim Colborn encountered, a condition that sent him under the knife three times in barely one calendar year. Despite a stint on the disabled list for one of them during the season, he managed to win 10 games while starting 31 times. But he dropped 13 and had a 4.06 ERA, far off his 20-12 (and 3.18) of the previous season.

It's help in the pitching department, in fact, that seems to be about the only thing that stands between the Brewers and a shot at the flag. They've surely got a decent attack with the addition of Aaron as designated hitter and the presence of a solid rookie-of-the-year candidate, Sixto Lezcano, in the outfield. Also, there is no defense finer than that of the Brewers, who made fewer errors than anyone in the league last year and should have had a runaway winner (but didn't) in the Golden Glove voting with third baseman Don Money.

LUIS TIAANT, Boston ace, was 22-13 with 2.92 ERA and 7 shutouts last year.

RICO PETROCELLI, Boston third baseman, slides between legs of Umpire JOE BRINKMAN, but is tagged out at second by Oakland's DICK GREEN, who took throw from outfield.

The Brewers trailed the league in team batting in '74, but that was because their DHs batted only .222, an anemic figure which a whole lot of pitchers probably could have equaled. Aaron, with his lifetime .310, is supposed to change all that. Manager Del Crandall says he will play Henry occasionally in the outfield, too, all of which should get him to bat more than 500 times for the first time in five years.

While Aaron is employed in his new DH role for the most part, John Briggs, Bob Coluccio, and rookie Lezcano probably will be the outfield from left to right. Dave May went away in the Aaron deal after a disappointing season in which his home runs dropped from 25 to 10. Briggs hit 17 homers and batted .253. Coluccio, still coming on at 23, hit only .223.

Veteran Ken Berry was released, and this indicates the Brewers saw no great need of protecting the debut of Young. Lezcano, a sturdy Puerto Rican who is labeled "can't miss" after batting .325 with 34 homers at Sacramento. There is, of course, the sobering fact that homers come almost with the frequency of singles in Sacramento, where the short foul lines are so inviting that one player is said to have hit a broken-bat grand slam. Gorman Thomas, another outfield hopeful up for his third try with the Brewers, hit 51 homers at Sacramento but led the Coast League in strikeouts. Thomas is 24, Lezcano barely 21. Also in the outfield picture is Rob Ellis, who divided last year between Sacramento and Milwaukee and whose chances are helped because he can eliminate the need for a third catcher.

Receiving is in good hands, however, needing only to steer clear of injury. Darrell Porter caught in 117 games, Charlie Moore 61. They're only 23 and 21 years old, respectively, and both hit in the .240s, something Crandall can live with because he knows they'll get better. Porter chipped in with a dozen homers.

Money and George Scott are the slick-fielding corner men on a settled infield. Money made only five errors at third last year, setting an all-time major league record with a .984 defensive mark. Brooks Robinson, who fielded .967, won the "Glove"—quite likely because the voting is done before the season ends. Scott led first base regulars defensively and hit .281 with 17 homers; Money .283 and 15. Pedro Garcia was a plate disappointment, victim perhaps of the sophomore jinx at .199. Yount broke in impressively at .250 in 197 games, and Tim Johnson, a four-position man, was the teenager's capable fill-in. Bob Hansen and Mike Hegan are a pair of lefthanded swingers for first base or DH aid.

The Brewers took a gamble on Pete Broberg, the 25-year old hurler who was highly sought in '71 but has been a flop in four trials with the Rangers. He was 0-4 last year and 4-5 at Spokane. He cost the Brewers Clyde Wright. Bill Champion was Milwaukee's top pitcher with an 11-4 record, his first winning season, and Tom Murphy had a surprising season in relief, finishing 10-10 with 20 saves and a 1.90 ERA. Ed Sprague was off to his best season but hurt his knee in July and pitched only three more innings while settling for 7-2. Jim Slaton started 35 times, and the Brewers feel he's ready to improve his 13-16. Eduardo Rodriguez was 7-4 and Bill Travers 2-3, both chiefly in relief.

BOSTON RED SOX

It's a fair assumption that the Red Sox, to become perfectly proper in Boston, will have to make a spring trade. The only one they made last winter stripped them of Tommy Harper, one of the club's most popular players, and while the reasoning behind it had logic, the Fenway faithful are a trifle restless.

Pure and simple, Harper is 34 years old. And while he does everything well, Dick O'Connell and Darrell Johnson not only see his best years behind him, they also want to open things up for a couple of rookies who certainly seem to be ready. If one could go for a team "entry" in the freshman derby this year, Boston's 1 and 1-A would be the twosome to be coupled. They are Jim Rice, '21, and Fred Lynn, '22, both power boys at Pawtucket last year and both with a light sampling of major league exposure as well.

But Lynn, who batted .282 in triple-A and came up to knock in 10 runs in 15 games, and Rice, who smashed 25 homers and hit .337 for Pawtucket, don't figure in the Red Sox outfield simultaneously. Rice seems ideally suited to the DH job, something he handled for the Red Sox in 16 games last year and may share with Cecil Cooper in Harper's absence. Cooper can play first, but that's where Carl Yastrzemski will retain squatter's rights as long as he plays the game. Yaz hit .301 in '74, and that doesn't sound like a 35-year old ready to call it quits, does it?

The outfield alignment was designed on the winter drawing board with Lynn in left, Rick Miller and Juan Beniquez sharing center, and the best hitter of these, Dwight Evans, (.281) in right. Tony Conigliaro was primed for a comeback, but if part of his rehabilitation does not include a stint in triple-A, Tony could be the major surprise of the spring.

Although the Conigliaro trial was a gesture by which they had nothing to lose, the Red Sox can't afford to play without a couple of their comeback-bound batterymen and still call themselves contenders. They've got to have a healthy Carlton Fisk and Rick Wise, both of whom missed most of last year with injuries—Fisk a shattered knee that required surgery and Wise calcium deposits in his shoulder. Fisk, a big hitter and team leader, caught only 50 games, yet homered 11 times; Wise, who came from the Cardinals the previous winter, pitched only nine times and was 3-4 after winning 16 for the Cards. Wise can hit, too, but he's in the wrong league for that.

Boston has plenty of help in the catching department and, of course, has used it out of necessity. Bob Montgomery handled most of it last year, and 22-year old Tim Blackwell was brought on quicker than planned, appearing in 50 games. Tim McCarver, another veteran, was acquired for added insurance late in the season.

Beyond Luis Tiant, the major leagues' shutout leader with seven, Boston's pitching was hardly spectacular. Tiant won 22 and lost 13, and only seven in the league had better earned run averages than he. Bill Lee was the next biggest winner at 17-15. Reggie Cleveland, Dick Drago, and Roger Moret found themselves pitching relief and also starting last year. Johnson would like to define their roles. None had a winning season though Cleveland was 12-14 and again should start more often than not. Diego Segui, the veteran reliever, won six and saved 10, and the need is for a lefty to join him in the pen. Moret will get a test as short man, especially if Steve Barr, a southpaw who was 16-8 at Bristol, can start after making the leap from double-A. Barr won 11 in a row at one stretch in '74.

The Harper trade brought Bob Heise from the Angels. Heise is a sure-handed second baseman who can play elsewhere in the infield as well and seems more likely to be a utility man than a regular. Rick Burleson was one of several fine rookie shortstops in the league last year but the Red Sox keep talking about shifting him to second, reasoning perhaps that Doug Griffin's back problems might linger. If Burleson, who batted .284 in his debut, is required at second, Steve Dillard is the youngster they want at short. But Dillard has been hampered with shoulder trouble, which is the answer to why the Red Sox got Heise and also drafted Kim Andrew, a .317 hitter at Asheville, for infield insurance.

Rico Petrocelli slumped after a beaning last year but wound up with 15 homers, the same total as Yastrzemski. The veteran third baseman batted .267, one of the better averages in his 10-year career, and he hasn't talked about retirement lately.

O'Connell, the GM, has been keeping the Red Sox fairly deep in bench strength, and Bernie Carbo should get his heavy taste of outfield platooning and/or designated hitting against righthanded

WILLIE HORTON is healthy now and should add power to Tigers' attack, which lacked punch last season.

NATE COLBERT, rangy 1B, came to Detroit in 4-man deal with San Diego, and HANK AARON predicts Nate will hit 40 homers in Tigers' home park.

pitching. Danny Cater, whose emergency calls are growing less at age 35, and Mario Guerrero, who played more shortstop than Burleson (93 games), provide additional infield depth for a team that has extremely good everyday balance.

DETROIT TIGERS

Once the Tigers' management got over shedding crocodile tears about the deal that never came off last December (the Phils double-crossed 'em, they charged), there was time to reflect that things could be worse for them as they undertake 1975. True, Al Kaline has retired, and that's the loss of a superstar, no matter how you slice it—on the field and at the gate. But there's just one way to go: up!

The trade that fell thru with the Phils, after a handshake and even a call to get Bill Freehan's personal sanction under the 10-and-5 rule, denied the Tigers Bob Boone, who was earmarked as their catcher of the future. They thus retained Freehan, the 33-year old veteran who played as much first base last year as he caught. They also kept Mickey Stanley, who'd been packaged in the deal. But they did get a catcher anyway, collecting Terry Humphrey from the Expos. Then they sent Jerry Moses to the Mets on a trial basis.

Thus there is a crowd behind the plate, and some observers feel the Tigers aren't as bad off as they thought they were at this position. Humphrey, injured two years ago and crowded out last year by Barry Foote at Montreal, may bloom in new surroundings. And who is to say that Freehan, a .297 hitter with 18 homers, is through anyway?

The Tigers can be happy with the prospects of the big deal they DID make. Nate Colbert came from the Padres in exchange for three players, most noteworthy of which was Ed Brinkman. Hank Aaron says Colbert will hit 40 home runs, playing in Tiger Stadium, a statement indicating Hank must read the papers and watch TV. Like Colbert, Aaron has never played in Detroit, but he'll get there this year, too. You can bet that Colbert will be an everyday player—either DH or first base. Willie McCovey crowded him to the sidelines a lot at San Diego, and Nate hit only 14 homers.

The sacrifice of Brinkman was designed to open it all up at shortstop for young Tom Veryzer, who batted .296 at Evansville, got a 22-game trial with the Tigers, and is a rookie of the year prospect at age 22. John Knox hit .307 in 55 games, mostly at second base, and will duel Gary Sutherland, the regular in '74, for that job, according to Manager Ralph Houk. Nobody is going to unseat Aurelio Rodriguez at third, largely because of his glove. He doesn't hit much: .222 two years running.

There may be a shortage of infield utility help. Only seven were listed on the Tiger roster, and at least one of these, 21-year old Jerry Manuel, was there merely to fatten the numbers. Reggie Sanders came up for 26 games last year and may stick after a .292 year at Evansville. The outfield is more crowded with people on the fringe, and it seemed clear that GM Jim Campbell would be steering toward a trade in late spring. The progress of Ron LeFlore could be a key.

LeFlore was promoted from Lakeland last year after an intermediate stop in Evansville. He batted .260 in 59 games and at 22 seems ready to make it as a regular—and a fast one at that. He stole 68 bases last year, 23 of them for the Tigers. Veteran Willie Horton now 31 years old, played in only 72 games but batted .298 and belted 15 homers in a year of physical problems. Willie is sound now and undoubtedly back in left field. Gates Brown probably will be a designated hitter, but the presence of some more new outfielders—Dan Meyer, Leon Roberts, and Art James—in the spring had Houk considering Horton for the DH role, too. With Stanley and Ben Oglivie on hand, there scarcely seemed room for more than one of the newcomers, however.

The Tigers batted only .247 as a team last year, were dead last in pitching effectiveness, and fielded better only than Texas. Little wonder they wound up last in the East. But Houk, who invited Jim Turner to help in the spring, sees improvement in this year's mound staff, basing his assumption on an insistence that Joe Coleman, Mickey Lolich, and Lerin LaGrow are better pitchers than they were in '74. Of these only Coleman (14-12) had a winning record, but all three had rotund earned run averages, due in no small measure to the unalterable fact that their ball park is a home run paradise. The Tiger staff surrendered 148, tops in the A.L.

Of the strangers to his staff, Houk sees Vern Ruhle as the best. He came up from Evansville and was 2-0 in September and won 20 games total with three clubs. He's a 6-1 righthander with fine control. Tom Walker, obtained from Montreal, was 5-0 at Memphis and 4-5 with the Expos and could fit into the rotation. Luke Walker (no kin) gives the staff a lefty to go along with Lolich, a 21-game loser in 41 starts. But there's another lefty who has become even more important, John Hiller, the amazing comeback guy who had another great year in the bullpen, winning 17 and saving 13. There's not another man on the staff with a save, by the way.

CLEVELAND INDIANS

If the Indians had landed Catfish Hunter to go along with the intrigue of Frank Robinson as Baseball's first Black major league manager, plus the unique boxoffice lure provided by the best brother act among pitchers since Paul and Dizzy Dean, there's no telling how many fans would have dropped in at Municipal Stadium this season.

That's a cavernous ball park, and it once held a record 84,587 fans for a double header against the Yankees in 1954. All those seats, if filled with a little more regularity, surely offer the potential to pay for the high-priced ball player, then. But without Hunter, for whom the Indians bid high, the big man at the pay window will be Robinson himself. Frank becomes the highest paid manager of all-time and must justify it by being a player-manager.

There was some talk that he will play first base more than occasionally. But it's a better bet that the Designated Hitter gives him his real avenue to active status, and he can continue his onslaught on 600 homers and 3000 hits (he needs 26 and 100) while spending most of the game directing the club from the bench. Robinson is 39, and while his offensive contributions in 1974 were hardly devastating (he batted .245), he continued to show power with 22 homers and should hit more in Cleveland, a park better suited to the long ball.

The Brothers Perry—Gaylord and Jim—give Robinson excellent pitching at the top, but only if the ravages of age don't start to take a toll. Gaylord, who won 21 and lost 13, is 36; Jim, 17-12, is two years Gaylord's senior. For the fourth time in their lengthy careers, both were under 3.00 in the same season with respect to ERA. But Steve Kline will have to come around for the Indians. He has done little due to an ailing elbow since coming from the Yankees two years ago, and he declined winter surgery, insisting that an exercise program has left him ready to turn his 5 and 10 season around.

The Indians, who will double team their pitching instruction with Harvey Haddix and Bullpen Chief Jeff Torborg on the staff, hope to get Steve (Call-Me-Doctor) Arlin, Dick Bosman, and Milt Wilcox turned around, too. Fritz Peterson (9-14) could be joined by Bruce Ellingsen in the need for a starting left hander who can win consistently. One rookie, Jim Kern, has a good chance. A rightie, he was 17-7 at Oklahoma City and the Association's pitcher of the year.

Another freshman might crowd into the Tribe infield this year. He is Duane Kuiper, who batted .310 at Oklahoma City and made the league's all-star team. He got enough September exposure under the big top to impress another late arrival, Robinson.

TOBY HARRAH contributed surprising 21 home runs and drove in 74 runs for Texas Rangers last year.

DAVE NELSON, swift 2B, stole 25 bases in 1974, and probably would have had more if not injured.

Kuiper went 11-for-22 in 10 games with the Indians. Jack Brohamer, who hit .270, is the incumbent at second, and Angel Hermoso, fit now after knee surgery, is another in the picture.

Frank Duffy has everybody pleased at shortstop, and only Baltimore's Mark Belanger regularly turns in defensive statistics any better than his. Few are concerned that Duffy rarely hits .250, noting perhaps that he has belted eight homers in each of the last two years.

Buddy Bell is another who went under the knife. His repaired damage to the right knee, which gave out on him twice last season after a basketball injury suffered during the previous winter. Bell nonetheless managed to bat .262 and hit seven homers in 115 games at third base. Buddy has the full-speed-ahead sign from his doctor after a heavy winter exercise schedule.

Once Robinson determines he can do more as DH than at first base, it would seem that Tom McCraw, a candidate as player-coach, will handle first. But John Ellis, who served there for 69 games last year and also caught, joins Rico Carty and Joe Lis as others in the grab bag at that position. Dave Duncan handles most of the catching, by the way, and although he hit 16 homers, his batting average was only .200.

Oscar Gamble quite likely will have to vacate his DH role. He became well adjusted to it last year, batting .296, second only to the Royals' Hal McRae. But Gamble will join the enlarged gathering in left field, where John Lowenstein was last year's mainstay while batting only .242. Leron Lee is another with hopes to play that position, and a youngster named Tommie Smith could upset things after a .312 campaign at Oklahoma City. Smith was denied a shot at the varsity a year ago when he broke an arm in three places playing basketball.

It's hard to envision anyone dislodging Charlie Spikes from right field or George Hendrick from center. Robinson is determined to motivate Hendrick, who remains short of his true potential, some feel, despite 19 homers and a .279 average. Spikes, the RBI leader at 80, smashed 22 homers and hit .271.

WEST

TEXAS RANGERS

This club has to scare you some. It vaulted from nowhere last year behind the pitching of its major trade acquisition, Ferguson Jenkins. It had a corner on post-season awards that went to Billy Martin (top manager), Jeff Burroughs (MVP), and Mike Hargrove (best rookie). A solid second place finish, five laps astern of the powerful A's, was enough to cause forecasters to jump on the Ranger bandwagon this year. Some are picking them to win it all.

There's still an overall shortage in Texas pitching, once you get past Jenkins, but Martin has a decent relief pitcher in Steve Foucault. He may have an improved bullpen with the addition of rookie Jeff Terpko and perhaps will come up with the added starter he so desperately needs from somewhere in the grab bag of retreads he has collected.

But if Billy could finish second in the West in '74 with pitching that was near the bottom and a defense that was dead last in percentage, he felt justified in making any modest improvement he could in winter trades. He may have done more than that.

The outfield defense got a shot in the arm when Willie Davis was acquired from Montreal for the second top rookie candidate to be dealt off by the Rangers in the last two winters. The 34-year old Davis, who stole 25 bases and batted .295 for the Expos, came in exchange for Pete Mackanin, an all-purpose infielder who comes off two fine years in triple-A. The Rangers, top-heavy with young infielders, saw the fruits of one trade that sent Bill Madlock and Vic Harris to the Cubs for Jenkins a year earlier. Why not try the same kind of a deal to land Davis? Mackanin belted 28 homers and drove in 103 runs last year for Spokane in a hitters' league.

The Rangers' outfield took on a lot of clarity with the invasion of Davis. Joe Lovitto, a switch hitter

"still in our plans," says Martin, will find himself in a backup role again because Burroughs and Cesar Tovar surely figure as the regulars on either side of Davis, the new man in the middle. Burroughs' MVP credentials were: 25 homers (most of them early), 118 RBI, and a .301 batting average. Tovar, 34 years old now, hit a steady .292.

The Ranger farm system continues to yield dividends, and one of the more interesting additions is Tom Robson, who is listed as an outfielder but can thrive on this Ranger club only as a designated hitter. Robson is a 29-year old rookie finally getting a trial after being named the Pacific Coast League's MVP for 131 RBI, 41 homers, and a .322 average.

Robson, a man without a position, is no overnight sensation. In eight minor league seasons, he shows 184 home runs—38 for Pittsfield in '73 and 35 for Visalia in '69 among lesser amounts along the way.

Toby Harrah, the shortstop who played in every game last season and suddenly became a power hitter with 21 homers, has to feel better about the trade of Mackanin. He and Davey Nelson are the Ranger keystone, and they hope to cut down their errors. Nelson missed five weeks with a sprained ankle and broken nose last year. Jim Spencer and Jim Fregosi, a pair of veteran infielders, also sat out portions of the season with nagging injuries. But Lenny Randle appears to have claimed the regular third base job after batting .302 and playing less outfield. Hargrove figures to get more first base duty and less as a DH in the wake of his .323 freshman campaign. Spencer hit seven homers and offers the left handed platooning at first base; Fregosi smashed a dozen in only 78 games and is top-notch utility material. Mike Cubbage, 24, hit .312 at Pittsfield and .316 at Spokane and will demand attention soon in the crowded infield picture.

Many opposing managers rate Catcher Jim Sundberg as the best in the league. His outstanding arm kept foes from running recklessly against Ranger pitchers and he led the league's receivers with 15 double plays. Sundberg, 23, has only two years in baseball and batted .247 as a rookie after winning promotion to the roster in the spring. Veteran Duke Sims and rookie Bill Fahey, both left handed hitters, are in the wings.

Jenkins' introduction to Texas was a smash. He finished second in the Cy Young voting (behind Catfish Hunter) and even got some first place support while running strong in the MVP race, something pitchers rarely do. Fergie was 25-12 with a 2.82 ERA, pitched 29 complete games, and fanned 225 batters. The big Canadian turned 31 in December and sees a chance to win 100 games in the American League before he's through. He won 149 in the National, including six straight 20-game seasons for the Cubs.

But even though Jim Bibby was 19-19, Jackie Brown 13-12, and Steve Hargan 12-9, there was a big drop-off after Jenkins. And that's why Martin hoped to trade for another hurler during the new interleague period in late March. He's got Clyde Wright, a 9-20 southpaw from Milwaukee, and Bill Hands, a late season escapee from the Twins, but he wasn't convinced that this was enough for a flag.

JORGE ORTA, White Sox' slick second baseman, relays ball to first after making forceout on Indians' RUSTY TORRES.

CHICAGO WHITE SOX

Here is a club which took a new direction toward regaining the status of a contender, one which was not totally accepted by the fans over the winter but one which surely fits into President Ford's "WIN" campaign—and hopefully Owner John Allyn's as well.

The White Sox lopped off close to $400,000 in player salaries from their bulky but unproductive payroll. They also refused from the start to get drawn into the Catfish Hunter auction, although General Manager Roland Hemond longed for Allyn's green light to do so. But surely no one knew better than Allyn what it was like to pay one player wages double anyone else on the club. He all but ordered Hemond to dump Dick Allen at the Winter Meetings, and when the controversial slugger went to the Braves for a token amount of cash and a player-to-be-named dependent upon Allen's reporting to Atlanta, the mission was accomplished.

Later, to the surprise of no one, Ron Santo spared himself what undoubtedly would have been his unconditional release in the spring by retiring in December. Allen's paycheck, the last part of a three-year contract, was somewhere between $225,000 and $250,000. Santo was drawing $110,000, maybe more.

WILBUR WOOD, renowned knuckleballer, remains mainstay of Chicago staff and last season, he again won 20 games.

But Ron makes more as an oil company vice president. Only Wilbur Wood, the veteran knuckleball artist, remained in six figures with the White Sox, although Ken Henderson vaulted this winter to that plateau in the light of his 1974 achievements.

Henderson, Chicago player of the year, batted .292, hit 20 homers, and drove in 95 runs, the latter figure passing up Allen for team honors after Allen "retired" from a fading contender Sept. 14. Richie, who hit his last homer on Aug. 16, saw his total of 32 hold up for the American League title nevertheless. He knocked in 88 runs, and when the Allen era was over, Manager Chuck Tanner was full of praise for the man who set his own timetable but continually produced. "He was the best player in the American League," insisted Tanner.

Obviously, Tanner, Hemond, and Owner Allyn feel they can maintain what Richie got started for them. A number of young players came through for the White Sox in '74, led by the new keystone tandem of Rookie Bucky Dent and sophomore Jorge Orta. Dent batted .274 in 154 games and shared the shortstop double play lead with Fred Patek. He also led the league with 23 sacrifice bunts and was outfielded only by Mark Belanger and Frank Duffy. Orta batted .316, second best in the league.

Also in the department of youth, the White Sox got a shot in the arm by the return of Bart Johnson, a gigantic pitcher who decided in the spring to retire at age 24 and worked for the front office of Chicago's World Football League for a time. Seeing the error of his ways, Bart reported to Iowa to shape up in triple-A, then came to the big club in July and wound up winning 10 and losing only four with a 2.74 ERA that helped Veteran Jim Kaat right a tottering mound picture.

KEN HENDERSON, veteran outfielder, was named White Sox' player of the year in 1974 after batting a solid .292.

TERRY FOSTER of Chicago led AL relievers in 1974.

BILL SHARP again is a top candidate for Chisox' OF job.

Kaat, winning seven in a row twice during the season, finished 21-13 for his first 20-game season since 1966. From there on, it was one big experiment in the spring to determine whether or not the Sox would find it necessary to swing a big trade (interleague perhaps) for the pitcher most observers say they need. They had Roger Nelson aboard after his 4-4 season and elbow-shoulder miseries at Cincinnati. They hoped Rich Gossage was ready to put it together after a disappointing 4-6. They saw a chance for Jack Kucek, who made a meteoric rise from class A last August. But Kucek's 1-4 hinted at a need for time in triple-A. Wood (20-19) will take the ball every third or fourth day, of course, but his knuckler has been "tumbling" some and was hit more frequently of late.

Cecil Upshaw was a cost-free gamble at helping Terry Forster in the bullpen, and Tanner hopes Stan Bahnsen and Cy Acosta can improve upon poor seasons. Forster, the top fireman with 24 A.L. saves and seven wins, pitched frequently with a pulled groin muscle, and Acosta was sidelined by injury, reducing the bullpen's effectiveness.

With Allen gone, Tony Muser has his big chance as regular first baseman. Tony hit .291 in only 206 at-bats and is regarded as a glove artist. Lamar Johnson and Carlos May could see some duty at first as well, Johnson winning a shot after a good year at Iowa. Third base is all Bill Melton's now, and some feel he will thrive with Santo gone. He hit 21 homers but only .242. With Eddie Leon and Santo gone, Bill Stein and BeeBee Richard appear to have the utility roles.

Buddy Bradford suffered two injuries last year, including a broken collarbone, and this was costly to the club's right handed hitting. Buddy didn't bat 100 times, but he whacked five homers and hit .333. Bill Sharp (.253), Pat Kelly (.281), and May (.249) round out the outfield with Henderson, although Nyls Nyman could jump from double-A to join the list. Ed Herrmann and Brian Downing (10 homers each) afford platooning of catchers.

OAKLAND ATHLETICS

Say one thing for the Oakland A's. They didn't have nearly as many roster problems to solve this spring as most clubs. Their winter list was down to 31 players before the first ball was thrown, no thanks to Jim Hunter. This required only six trims to get to the player limit and five weeks of spring training in which to do it.

This is not to say that Owner Charlie Finley wasn't doing his usual shopping to find perhaps a second baseman to take the place of Dick Green after the latter's annual winter retirement. Dal Maxvill was released, you see, and Manny Trillo, who might have won the job, went to the Cubs as part of the trade that brought Billy Williams.

Higher on Oakland's priority list, however, was a pitcher to take at least part of the slack caused by the defection of Hunter. Finley planned to go to the highest court in an effort to reclaim Hunter, yet had to operate on the assumption that his 25-game winner would be with the Yankees. In other years, Finley had been able to come up with such veterans as Maxvill, Matty Alou, and Deron Johnson when he had a need for hitting or a defensive addition. But for anything resembling quality hurling, a trade seemed his only avenue to help.

Oakland's pitching was the best in the league last year, largely because of Hunter and his 2.49 earned run average. Ken Holtzman (19-17) and Vida Blue (17-15) had ERAs of 3.07 and 3.26, and these weren't bad. This year, however, Blue and Holtzman will be looked upon to lead the club. Dave Hamilton, a lefty who was 7-4 in a combined starting and relief role, figures as the third starter, and Blue Moon Odom, who dipped to 1-5, will get more responsibility than he's had since he was 15-6 in '72. Glen Abbott, a rookie who started 17 times and showed promise with a 5-7 audit, rates the best look, and Leon Hooten should stick, too, if only by the slimness of the numbers.

Rollie Fingers, the mustachioed backbone of the bullpen, and Paul Lindblad, the left handed relief ace, are about all that's left of the short duty corps.

SAL BANDO, A's captain, bowled over Dodgers' STEVE YEAGER, but still was out at home in 1974 World Series game.

REGGIE JACKSON provides Oakland with consistent power. Last season, he batted .289 with 29 homers and 93 RBI.

Fingers won nine, saved 18; Lindblad, less spectacular here, had a super ERA: 2.05. Darold Knowles and Bob Locker were traded to the Cubs. But without the starting depth Hunter provided, Manager Al Dark will learn soon—if he doesn't know it already—that eight or nine pitchers won't be enough this year. Another rookie will have to surface on the staff if a trade is not forthcoming.

The rookie regarded as having the best chance is Phil Garner, and he's not a pitcher. Garner is a third baseman by trade but significantly he was worked at second while playing winter ball. Ted Kubiak is the only veteran at the position. He played 71 games there last year, seeing duty late much of the time after someone had pinch hit for Green. No one expected the A's to go into the season without adding an infielder.

No help is required at shortstop, of course. Bert Campaneris is among the best and batted .290 while stealing 34 bases. Sal Bando, a member of the "old guard," is back at third base despite distorted rumors that he and Reggie Jackson would be traded last winter. Sal sagged to .243 at the plate but belted 22 homers and was tough in the clutch as always. Pat Bourque has been reacquired to back up Gene Tenace at first base.

It was hard to peg one designated hitter with the A's last year. Dark used no fewer than five of them who appeared in 19 games or more. One was Deron Johnson, who came back from Boston, then left again. Matty Alou and rookie Claudell Washington had the most success, hitting .286 and .273, respectively, in DH calls. But the A's picked up Billy Williams from the Cubs for that duty this year, and it's not likely that Williams, the ex-Cub, will see much duty in the field. Billy is nearing 37. He plays left adequately but a trial at first base last summer was hardly a success. He batted .280 in 117 games.

Tenace hit only .211 last year, yet smacked 26 homers. He rebels at platooning, but Joe Rudi may play first more often this year, opening up the outfield for Washington or Williams in left. Bill North, Oakland's base stealing ace (54 of 'em), batted .260 and holds forth in center. Jackson, who batted .289, hit 29 homers but his 93 RBI was only third on the club behind Bando (103) and Rudi (99). Angel Mangual is the spare outfielder. He played in 133 games last year, half the time as a batter only.

Herb Washington, the focal point of Finley's vain attempt to install the designated runner, was a pinch runner in 92 games, stealing 29 bases and nailed 16 times. He doesn't bat, and last year neither did Catcher Ray Fosse as often as he'd like. Fosse underwent surgery for a slipped disc after intervening in the famous North-Jackson clubhouse scrap June 5, leaving Larry Haney, another nonhitter, to share the catching with Tenace.

MINNESOTA TWINS

Only the Oakland A's were a better home club than the Twins last year. That's a nice statistic, but it doesn't win pennants until it is translated into at least modest success on the road. Owner Calvin Griffith has something else going for him that he feels will start showing up in the victory column this year, however. His farm clubs had the best overall record in all of baseball last season.

It appears that whatever success the Twins have in 1975 will come from within the organization. Failing in efforts to trade away either Harmon Killebrew or Tony Oliva, their $180,000 designated hitter "platoon," they left the Winter Meetings with the same ball club that finished third in the American League West. That may not have been all bad, of course, because Manager Frank Quilici had his club in high gear over the second half of the campaign (56-41 after late June). And by January Killebrew was dropped—hired eagerly by the Royals.

It doesn't figure that there will be a wholesale intrusion into the Minnesota picture by rookies this year. In fact, Quilici appeared to be considering seriously only four of them, although—like any manager—he'd be pleased if anyone else could surprise him. Those given the best chances to win jobs were Pitchers Tom Johnson and Juan Veintidos, Infielder Sergio Ferrer, and Outfielder Lyman Bostock.

But if more than a couple of these play anything close to a major role on this stand-pat ball club, it will be only through a general lightening of the roster or a few injuries. Catcher Randy Hundley was released, even as he was recuperating from his latest knee operation last fall.

The Twins have a league batting champion in their midst, however, in the person of Rod Carew, who punched out a .364 tune while playing a less-than-sensational second base. Their team batting tied Texas at .272 for the league lead, and their pitching, headed by Bert Blyleven, was better, at least, than six other clubs.

Quilici sees the difference between this club and its predecessors as one with no definitive spots that need to be filled, such as others had.

LARRY HISE helped Twins attack with .286 average.

ROD CAREW was major's best hitter, compiling .364 mark.

BERT BLYLEVEN was only 17-17 last year, but he had fourth lowest ERA in the American League with 2.66 and was second in strikeouts with 249.

BILL CAMPBELL was Minnesota's ace reliever with 8 wins and 19 saves.

Oliva will be the DH. Tony O came out of minor knee surgery in October "fully recovered," a club spokesman said. Oliva hit .285 with 13 homers.

The outfield is even more settled than Oliva's singular role. Four men handled the job almost exclusively last year, Steve Brye, Bob Darwin, Larry Hisle, and Steve Braun. This year they've got Braun listed as an infielder, which likely means a shot at first base and/or some added duty at third, where he played 17 games in '74. It's a bit of added maneuverability for Braun's left handed stickwork amid a club heavy with right handed punch. Braun batted .280, Brye .283, Hisle .286, and Darwin, who was the leader with 25 homers, .264.

Craig Kusick appears to have the inside track at first base, however. Up after an impressive start at Tacoma, Kusick whacked eight homers in 201 official trips to the plate and figures to improve upon a .239 batting average. You don't look beyond Carew at second base. He's only 29 and Griffith is determined to resist trade offers for a gent Quilici puts in Ty Cobb's class.

Luis Gomez and Jerry Terrell got a taste of short-stop last season, but eventually dependable Danny Thompson surfaced as the number one man and is determined to hold the office again this year despite the arrested leukemia which seems to concern others more than it does him. Danny batted .250 in 97 games. Ferrer, a 25-year old Puerto Rican, hit .290 at Tacoma and will get a good look.

Eric Soderholm has turned into a dependable third baseman and batted .276. Terrell, who played the outfield and all four infield positions last year, batted .245 without any home runs, and he stands as the number one utility player. Catching is in good hands. Glenn Borgmann, an Eddie Stanky protege from South Alabama, led the league's receivers defensively and batted .252. Veteran Phil Roof is a capable caddie.

Blyleven was 17-17 last season but his earned run average of 2.66 was the league's fourth best and his strikeouts (249) second only to Nolan Ryan. Joe Decker (16-14) came into his own with a 3.29. Dave Goltz came up from Tacoma and was 10-10, and Bill Campbell emerged as one of the game's best relievers, winning eight and saving 19 with 2.63 effectiveness. Johnson won twice in September relief after jumping from Orlando. Vic Albury rates as the fourth starter alongside Goltz, Decker, and Blyleven, and Quilici has hopes that lefty Bill Butler and Veintidos—the latter 12-4 at Tacoma—can enter the picture. Ray Corbin's name was dangled in trade conjecture, but he made it through the winter.

CALIFORNIA ANGELS

Dick Williams is full of praise for his 1975 Angels, a club which he will have the opportunity to manage this season from the very outset—and one which he insists is better than a .500 team.

"We have the best group of four starting pitchers in the league," he states boldly, "and we have the fastest outfield, too."

Williams, who inherited a last place team in the midst of growing pains when Bobby Winkles was dumped early last season, quite likely has the players to back up these statements. The hurlers are Nolan Ryan, Frank Tanana, Andy Hassler, and Bill Singer; the outfielders are Mickey Rivers, Morris Nettles, and the freshly-obtained Tommy Harper.

Pitching unquestionably is the strong point of this ball club, especially if Singer responds to the surgery for removal of a disc and is physically capable of returning to the effectiveness he showed as a 20 game winner in 1973, his first year with the Angels. The 30-year-old right hander who did manage a 7-4 record in limited '74 work, said his back was stronger than ever when he began throwing lightly in December.

Ryan, the world's foremost strikeout artist (329, 383, 367 last three years), was 22-16 with a 2.89 earned run average last season, and his fast ball was clocked at 100.8 miles per hour during a September victory over the White Sox. Ryan is barely 28, and he's the number one untouchable in the Gene Autry stable. Tanana was 14-19 as a rookie. He's only 21 and everybody in baseball wants him. But GM Harry Dalton has a consistent "no" ready for these inquiries, too. Hassler, a 23-year old lefty, began to bloom last year, too, with two shutouts among his seven victories after coming up from Salt Lake City.

Major emphasis beyond the Angels' Big Four turns quite naturally to the bullpen, where help is sorely needed. The entire staff recorded only 12 saves last year, equaling Texas for the low figure in the league—in fact both majors. Orlando Pena and Horacio Pina (both pronounced Peen'ya) were acquired along the way, Ed Figueroa and Luis Quintana were less than sensational and El Paso grad Don Kirkwood (9-4) was among those getting shots at curing the void in firemanship this spring; also well-traveled Chuck Dobson.

Catching was another winter-long headache for the Angels, but they hoped to have a depth problem cured by opening day. They bought the rights to dicker with Cleveland's retired Ken Suarez and hoped he'd join Ellie Rodriguez, hard-working regular whose only rostered back-up man was Tom Egan.

Harper is the newcomer whose presence most pleases Williams, although Bill Sudakis, obtained from the Yankees, could do wonders for the Angels if he proves, as he says he will, that he can hold down the third base job.

FRANK TANANA, fireballing left-hander, won 14 games as a 20-year-old rookie for the California Angels last year.

TOM EGAN, Angels' backup catcher, demonstrates eagerness and hustle. MICKEY RIVERS, Angels' speedster, swiped 30 bases during '74 season. ELLIE RODRIGUEZ did virtually all of Angels' catching and hit .253.

Harper's skills were restricted at Boston last season due to injuries and he batted only .237 in 118 games. But he managed to steal 28 bases and because he swiped 54 and led the league as recently as 1973, Williams boasts that his outfield "relay team" of Harper, Nettles, and Rivers can steal 150 this year. Nettles, who came up from Salt Lake at mid-season and hit .274, will play center; Rivers, who batted .285 with time off for a broken hand, will go to left, and Harper to right if he's not the DH. Joe Lahoud had his best year batting .271 in 127 games, and Lee Stanton has every right to wonder what the addition of Harper means to him. Lee hit 11 homers and batted .267 in 118 games. Then there's Bobby Valentine, an infielder-outfielder whose latest injury was a dislocated shoulder. Additionally, the Angels are measuring the progress of John Balaz, 24, who led the Texas league with 177 hits and 111 RBI.

Bruce Bochte, a lanky Californian whom the Angels hope to assign permanently to first base, is listed as an outfielder, which is where he played much of the time after coming up from Salt Lake last year. He hit .270 with five homers in 57 games. They want Dave Chalk to settle at shortstop, too. He broke in batting .252 but was erratic in the field and he'd better hurry. The Angels see Mike Miley as only a year away after a smashing double-A debut of 13 homers and a .286 mark fresh from the LSU campus to shortstop at El Paso.

Denny Doyle has Angel fans content with his second basemanship (12 errors: 146 games), and the utility positions appear to be in the hands of Winston Llenas, Rudy Meoli, and glove man Orlando Ramirez. Sudakis, insisting his knee has been 100 per cent sound since 1973, played in 89 games for the Yankees in '74 and hit seven homers. A year earlier, his 15 for Texas in only 235 times up was the league's best homer-at bat ratio. Williams may see Bill as a DH. And he remembers he can catch, too.

KANSAS CITY ROYALS

Little wonder Owner Ewing Kauffman made a vigorous bid for Jim (Catfish) Hunter this winter. His Royals suffered the biggest fall in the Western Division, tumbling from second to fifth last season, and when they left the Winter Meetings empty-handed in the trading department, Kauffman saw a chance to turn things around with one dramatic move.

Pitcher Steve Busby, the no-hit ace of the Royals' mound staff, is one who feels Kauffman and General Manager Joe Burke really didn't need to make any major deals to get things going again. "We're a strong club, the way it is," said Busby over the winter.

But it wasn't long before they made a consolation move anyway, signing Harmon Killebrew, veteran slugger freed by the Twins.

The Royals were only three games out of first in August before the bottom fell out of their chances in a horrid slump at home (3-11). They wound up eight games under .500 and 13 off the pace. But key injuries to their big slugger, John Mayberry, and to the pitcher they'd acquired from the Pirates, Nelson Briles, surely were major factors in the decline of this erstwhile contender. Mayberry missed 36 games but hit 22 home runs nonetheless. Briles was out of the rotation for two months and won only five games. Depth, then, in key positions was something the Royals didn't have.

What they did have, however, was solidity down the middle, which is that quality around which pennant winners supposedly are built. Few clubs in the majors can match this alignment up the center of the diamond: Catcher Fran Healy, a keystone of Fred Patek and Cookie Rojas, and Centerfielder Amos Otis. Rojas and Otis won Golden Gloves, and Patek tied Chicago's Bucky Dent for the shortstop double play lead at 108.

The Royal's outfield is a good one. Hal McRae is the offensive leader, and his .310 batting average was third in the American League. In 148 games, McRae smashed 15 homers and knocked in 88 runs to pace the club in his second year since leaving the Reds. Otis hit .284 and drove in 73 runs; Jim Wohlford was a .271 hitter with speed. McRae was the designated hitter more than he served in the outer garden, however, and Manager Jack McKeon is happy for that because of an influx of youngsters who show skills with the glove and bat. Al Cowens, who played 110 games as a rookie, is only 23, the same age of the freshman with the best chance this year, Tom Poquette, up from Omaha.

DOUG BIRD, hard-throwing righty, was Kansas City's No. 1 reliever last season, with a 10-7 record and a 2.73 ERA.

And although Vada Pinson is 36 years old, he managed to play 115 games in 1974 and hit .276 in his 16th major league season. With Killebrew the likely DH, the Royals surely can afford now to trade an outfielder.

The quick development of George Brett, a rookie third baseman who came on the scene in May and batted .282, is another indication that the farm system is looked upon as the Royals' salvation. Brett will be 22 in May. Tony Solaita contributed seven homers as Mayberry's major stand-in, but beyond Solaita and Frank White there is little infield depth in the picture, thus aiding 21-year old Rodney Scott's chances, although Scott is more likely to get the year in triple-A that he needs.

Healy, finally a fulltime catcher, batted .252 with nine homers. Buck Martinez is the number 2 man, having spelled Healy in 38 games. This is another spot where any of those unpredictable injuries could cause a severe problem.

Kansas City's pitching, headed in victories by Busby's 22-14, displayed the fourth best ERA in the league. The big right hander, only 25, did not have the staff's best earned run average, ironically. His was 3.39, and Al Fitzmorris, who won 13 and lost only six, was 2.79. Doug Bird, a 24-year old reliever who saved 10 and won seven, was 2.73. Veteran Bruce Dal Canton, used occasionally in long relief along with his starting roles, finished 8-10 with a 3.13.

Paul Splittorff, a 20-game winner in 1973, was a disappointment in '74. The big lefty slipped to 13-19, and his earned run average jumped over the 4.00 mark. Splittorff, 28, is one of those from whom McKeon logically can expect better things—and he does. Marty Pattin, another veteran, was acquired from the Red Sox the previous winter but was another disappointment, winning only three of 10 decisions.

Time may be running out on Lindy McDaniel, now 39 and due to become a 20-year veteran if he lasts through the 1975 season. But Lindy, who was obtained from the Yankees, won just once and saved only one game in 38 appearances in relief. Lindy needs 53 games to reach 1,000. Steve Mingori was 2-3 as a relief man with a pair of saves. The only rookie with any chance to stick appeared to be Dennis Leonard, a 12-13 performer at Omaha who got a taste of the majors but dropped four games with the Royals in a September summons.

STEVE BUSBY won 22 games and hurled his 2nd no-hitter in the big leagues.

VADA PINSON hit .276 in 16th major league season in 1974 with Kansas City.

Designated Hitters

The DH is here to stay! What's next? The designated runner? The designated fielder? After the success of the designated hitter rule, introduced into the American League in 1973, other innovations may follow. Herb Washington of the World Champion Oakland A's appeared in 92 games last year without picking up a ball, bat or glove. All the former track star needed was to take his running shoes out of retirement and put them to use on the basepaths. He proved somewhat of a case for the use of designated runner, as statisticians, after wiping away all the dusty figures, showed Herbie scoring eight deciding runs. He created such "flack" about the designated runner, everyone forgot to argue about making the DH rule acceptable rather than controversial.

TOMMY DAVIS of Orioles was top DH in '73 and led in RBI in '74.

The following are the top ten DH's of the 1974 season. Included among them are five players who might not have seen any action at all if not for the DH rule, for they were almost physically unable to field a defensive position—Tommy Davis, Al Kaline, Frank Robinson, Tony Oliva and Harmon Killebrew. All would have seen decidedly less action if not for the designated hitter role.

TOMMY DAVIS, Baltimore slugger, led all designated hitters in RBIs last season with 83. He was the top DH in average in the initial season of 1973 with a .293 mark.

AL KALINE treated Detroit Tiger fans with another year of play mainly due to the DH rule. Manager Ralph Houk used the aging star almost exclusively in that role.

FRANK ROBINSON rapped out 20 HRs as a DH. This year he'll combine that role with his new post as "skipper" of the Cleveland Indians.

TONY OLIVA of the Minnesota Twins was able to bat a sound .278 as a DH despite being severely hampered by a lame knee.

HARMON KILLEBREW had a disappointing season last year, however he probably would have had no season at all if not for the DH rule.

JIM SPENCER, who lost his first base job with the Texas Rangers, showed his worth as a designated hitter with a .265 batting average. Actually he lost his regular spot in the lineup due to the rule. It allowed an untried rookie, Mike Hargrove, to show his wares as a hitter. Hargrove was so successful, manager Billy Martin inserted him in the regular lineup, then went on to win AL rookie of the year honors.

OSCAR GAMBLE of the Cleveland Indians, continued to improve as one of the top DH hitters in the American League, hitting .296 with 17 HRs and 53 RBI.

HAL McRAE led all designated hitters in average last year with .305 to help keep the Kansas City Royals in contention for the pennant in the AL West for most of the season.

DERON JOHNSON extended his playing career probably two years with the inception of the DH rule. Although he hit only .157 last year he was still considered a threat as three clubs pursued his services—Milwaukee, Oakland and Boston.

PAT KELLY helped prove his worth to the White Sox with a DH batting average of .260.

ROY WHITE, hitting .259 as a designated hitter last season, was of invaluable help to the Yankees in their bid for the pennant.

RON BLOMBERG, another Yankee, is the most likely candidate to reach stardom in the DH role. Ronnie has had problems, however the DH rule allows him to bat every day. If he ever learns to handle lefthanded pitching adequately, Blomberg will make the DH rule even more popular than it has become.

TOMMY HARPER with the Boston Red Sox, is an example of how a player can be hurt by the DH rule. Tommy, accustomed to playing as a regular, hit only .179 as a designated batter, well below his yearly average.

HAL McRAE of Royals led all DH batsmen with healthy .305 average.

In the spring of 1973, his first as the Philadelphia manager, Danny Ozark was asked who he favored in the National League East. His answer was that you could throw a blanket over the entire division, a remark that sparked the imagination of one Philadelphia paper that decided to run a daily cartoon centered around Danny and his blanket.

That Ozark was often seen eating the blanket was indicative—you'll excuse the expression—of the cartoon's biting nature.

Well, despite the cynicism delivered by the paper boy, Ozark proved to be a prophet. Each of the last two races in the East has gone down to the wire and we look for another blanket finish in 1975.

This one, it's our opinion, will be won by Ozark's Phillies, which might be enough to prompt a kind word or complimentary cartoon, although in speaking of Philadelphia you can't be certain.

We start this National League preview with our opinion on the Phillies because we think that 1975 will be the year that the senior federation takes on a new look—and the Phillies are characteristic, if for no other reason than it has been 24 years since the Whiz Kids gave Philadelphia its last baseball title.

It has also been eight years since Koufax and Drysdale brought back-to-back pennants to Los Angeles and it is also our opinion that the Dodgers will win a second straight championship in the West and then defeat the Phillies for a second straight pennant.

These two teams are similar in that they both possess youth and confidence and are the products of well-supported organizations willing to spend money. They are also now the type teams that could rule for several years. They are, however, only part of the reason for believing this will be the summer of the new look.

Picture the National League without Henry Aaron. Or Bobby Bonds. Or Billy Williams. Or, for that matter, Lee May and Willie Davis. If all five aren't superstars, they're close enough, and last winter all five were traded to the American League, where Aaron and Williams—two genuine Hall of Famers—will continue to age gracefully as designated hitters.

What the National got in return for these five is not likely to inspire the league's publicity directors.

Oh, the Giants did receive Bobby Murcer, once thought of as the next Mantle, for Bonds, once described as the next Mays. And Houston did get a promising second baseman named Rob Andrews for May. But really, Davey May for Aaron, the home run king? And Bob Locker for Williams, he of the sweet swing? And two people named Mackanin and Stanhouse for Davis?

What is this? Well, what it would still seem to be is a very solid league, a league in transition, a league where the familiar names are being replaced by names that will soon be familiar.

Still eminent are Bench and Rose, Brock and Stargell, Morgan and Perez, Torre and Carlton, Gibson and Seaver. And if Aaron and Williams and May and Bonds and Davis are gone, it seems likely that the slack will be shouldered by Steve Garvey and Mike Schmidt, Bake McBride and Richie Zisk, Dave Concepcion and Keith Hernandez, a St. Louis first baseman who is the morning line favorite for Rookie of the Year.

There is even the possibility that a National League native will be returning in '75, although the possibility is greater that Dick Allen, having retired last year, will make first post rather than first pitch. Allen, however, could change his mind when he sees the size of Atlanta's bank account and the cozy dimension of the Georgia ballpark.

Remarkably, amid all this shift in power and personnel, there has not been one managerial casualty since the end of the '74 season. Last year's manager of the year, the venerable Walter Alston, 63, will be back at the helm of a Dodger team that can only benefit from the knowledge that it is capable of winning. The Dodgers have won 197 games over the last two years and will probably have to maintain that pace in baseball's toughest division.

And in Philadelphia, an Alston disciple, Danny Ozark, should parlay the winter acquisition of relief pitcher Tug McGraw into a division title—and a blanket of roses rather than a cartoonist's blanket of considerably different aroma.

EAST

PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES

It is a cliché, but nevertheless true, that in trading for McGraw, the Phillies have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

It is also true that they gave up a fine center fielder in Del Unser, a promising catcher in John Stearns and a fair relief pitcher in Mac Scarce.

But . . .

They have a number of candidates to replace Unser and a strong young catcher (Bob Boone) ahead of Stearns.

And in acquiring McGraw, they may have landed the one commodity they've most needed, a left-handed relief pitcher to go along with righthanders Gene Garber and Eddie Watt and the resident creator of spirit, George Culver.

McGraw, of course, was available only because he was coming off a bad season (6-11 with 3 saves) and there is some question about his physical status.

Tug was the victim of a bad back last year and the Mets contend that it may have led to a sore arm. McGraw scoffs at the theory, says his back is now fine and that the trade to Philadelphia restored a confidence that deteriorated as the Mets suddenly lost faith in him.

Naturally, Tug must prove he is capable of recapturing the stuff of his glory years, but the Phillies are not out much if he doesn't and far ahead if he does, for this is a club that seems strong in all other areas.

There is depth and potential, for instance, in a rotation of Steve Carlton, Jim Lonborg, Dick Ruthven, Wayne Twitchell and Ron Schueler. The cel-celebrated Carlton won 16 games last year while Longborg enjoyed his best season since '67, winning 17 against 13 defeats. Ruthven has won only six games in each of his two seasons, but now, at 24, may have the experience that will allow him to convert his acknowledged talent into a winning record. Twitchell, a 13 game winner in '73, should be ready to bounce back from the knee surgery of that October, a surgery that limited his availability and effectiveness last year when he was 6-9 in 25 games.

Bidding to break into the rotation is a 22-year-old lefthander named Tommy Underwood, who was 14-5 at Reading last year. Of Underwood, former pitching great Jim Bunning, now a manager in the Philly farm system, says, "he's the best young southpaw I've ever seen."

In support of the pitching, Philadelphia starts what is probably baseball's best young infield, an ebullient and confident quartet of Willie Montanez at first, Dave Cash at second, Larry Bowa at short and Mike Schmidt at third.

This group combined for a .290 batting average last year and a fielding percentage that was second in the league only to Houston. Cash, Bowa and Schmidt all made the All-Star team with Schmidt enjoying the most spectacular season, one in which he hit 36 home runs with 116 RBI.

EDDIE BRINKMAN, regarded as best fielding shortstop in majors, was dealt from Tigers to Cards after '74 season.

In the outfield, only one position is set. Greg Luzinski, coming back from a knee operation that took him out of 74 games, will start in left. At the other two positions, Ozark can choose from among Mike Anderson, Bill Robinson, Jay Johnstone, Don Hahn, Ollie Brown and Jerry Martin, a rookie up from Toledo.

ST. LOUIS CARDINALS

The Cardinals waged a sizzling September duel with the Pirates before finishing 1½ games back in the N.L. East. Between that disappointing finish to the regular season and the first day of 1975, general manager Bing Devine negotiated six separate transactions involving 16 players.

It would seem obvious that Devine strengthened the Cardinals in a number of areas. One would be defense, through the acquisition of standout shortstop Ed Brinkman. Another would be the bullpen, through the arrival of Elias Sosa, a right handed complement to lefthander Al Hrabosky. A third would be the bench, through the acquisition of Ron Fairly.

Devine also provided highly-touted first baseman Keith Hernandez with an opportunity by trading Joe Torre.

What the general manager was unable to do, however, was rehabilitate a rotation of proven ability but one that will enter the season carrying a number of question marks.

Back for one last year is Bob Gibson, a 39-year old Gibson who will attempt to rebound from an 11-13 season with finesse and control rather than the firepower of his youth.

Then there's John Curtis, a bright, articulate lefthander who seemed on the verge of a big career with the Boston Red Sox only to labor through a 10-14 summer with the Cardinals, his first in the National League.

It is probable that Lynn McGlothen will improve on his 16-12 season, but it is not known what to expect from Bob Forsch, a 25-year old right hander who pitched well down the stretch, recording a 7-4 mark over the last two months.

Also candidates for the rotation are veterans Claude Osteen and Ray Sadecki (the latter obtained from the Mets in exchange for Torre) 24-year-old Mike Garman, who pitched in relief last year, and the sore-armed Bill Parsons, a once-promising righthander purchased from Milwaukee.

It is this group of starters and potential starters that would seem to be St. Louis' only weak link.

The outfield is especially strong with Lou Brock (.306), Bake McBride (.309) and Reggie Smith (.309). While Brock received the headlines last year for his record 118 stolen bases, each of the three hit over .300, and the last time that happened in St. Louis was 1911.

The infield seems solid with Ted Simmons (.272) behind the plate, Ken Reitz (.271) at third, Brinkman (obtained in a three-way deal with Detroit and San Diego) at short, Ted Sizemore (.250) at second and the 21-year-old Hernandez, who led the American Assn. with a .351 average, at first.

Sosa (9-7 with 6 saves), who was acquired from the Giants along with veteran catcher Ken Rudolph in exchange for young catcher Marc Hill, joins with Hrabosky (8-1 with 9 saves), to give the Cardinals a proven one-two punch in the bullpen.

There is also a fair amount of depth behind those two, as there is on the bench, where Fairly will spend most nights. The Cardinals traded two minor leaguers, Rudy Kinard and Ed Kurpiel, for the veteran infielder-outfielder.

Another newcomer to the St. Louis bench will be infielder Teddy Martinez, obtained from the Mets for utility infielder Jack Heidemann. Martinez is basically a shortstop, as is Mike Tyson, who was the St. Louis regular last year. Tyson, however, was never able to shed the excess weight he reported to training camp with, prompting an unhappy Devine to trade for Brinkman.

PITTSBURGH PIRATES

The Pirates have won four of the last five titles in the NL East. Last year they did it with a second-half comeback from last place. This year the comeback will have to start earlier.

Specifically, if Ken Brett and Dave Giusti demonstrate in spring training that they will be unable to bounce back from post-playoff elbow operations, the Pirates would seem finished even before they start.

Brett was 13-9 last year, his first with the Pirates after being obtained from Philadelphia for Dave Cash. Relief ace Giusti was 7-5 with 12 saves. Giusti is 35 and will face a tougher recuperative period than Brett, who is 26.

It is the Pirates, however, who may face the toughest time of all. The organization has never been deep in pitching and it is unlikely that replacements for Brett and Giusti could be found without leaving the Pirates seriously thin.

The leading prospect in the Pittsburgh system is righthander Jim Minshall, 6-2 at Thetford Mines and 2-1 at Charleston last year. The Pirates would like to give Minshall a full year at Charleston, their triple-A affiliate.

Two others in the wings are Larry Demery, 6-6 as a rookie last year, and Bruce Kison, 9-8 as both spot starter and spot reliever. Demery, 21, has a promising future and so does Kison, 25, if he can shake the injuries that have plagued his brief career.

MARIO MENDOZA (11) leaves field after tagging out LA's DAVEY LOPES, who tried to stretch a single into a double.

Another candidate is Steve Blass, making his last bid to regain the fire and faith that allowed him to win 78 games over a five-year span between 1968 and '72. Over the last two years, Blass has won a total of one game.

The uncertainty surrounding Pittsburgh's pitching does not end with Brett and Giusti and Blass. Bob Moose underwent shoulder surgery during the winter while Dock Ellis is coming off a broken hand that kept him out of the playoffs.

The Pirates would like to think that their rotation will consist of Brett, Ellis (12-9), Jim Rooker (15-11) and Jerry Reuss (16-11). They are hopeful that righthander Giusti will be back to form a one-two relief punch with southpaw Ramon Hernandez.

Should the prayers be answered, this would free Kison, Demery and Moose for supporting roles, a category in which relief pitcher Jim Ray fits.

Ray was obtained from Detroit in one of only two winter moves made by the Pirates. The other found outfielder Gene Clines going to the Mets in exchange for catcher Duffy Dyer, who will be a back-up to Manny Sanguillen (.287).

The Pirates led the league in team batting average (.274) and it is unlikely there will be any new faces in the regular lineup. Bob Robertson (16 homers) and Ed Kirkpatrick are expected to platoon at first. Rennie Stennett (.291) will be at second. Two good-looking youngsters, Mario Mendoza and Frank Taveras, share short. Richie Hebner (.291) is the third baseman.

The outfield has Wilver Stargell (.301) in left, Al Oliver (.321) in center and Richie Zisk (.313) in right. That trio combined to drive in 280 runs last year and yet Oliver may move to first if the promising Harry Parker has come of age.

The Pirates also have two versatile reserves in Paul Popovich and Kirkpatrick. Bill Flowers, a 22-year old outfielder who batted .277 at Charleston, is expected to make a team that will be managed again by Danny Murtaugh, who fooled most observers by his decision to return.

NEW YORK METS

There may be at least 10 new players on the Mets' roster opening day, the most important of whom is Joe Torre, who will attempt to end the club's annual manhunt at third base.

The most important of all, however, would seem to be Tom Seaver, who must rebound from an 11-11 season if the Mets are to contend in the East.

Without Seaver's normal reliability, the Mets were unable to resurrect the September charge that carried them to a division title in 1973. Instead, in 1974, New York floundered in fifth place, finishing with a 71-91 record, 17 games behind the Pirates.

Seaver had won at least 16 games for seven straight seasons and there were a number of reasons why he didn't do so again, reasons that can be overcome in 1975, the Mets hopefully believe.

The club contends that Seaver, who was plagued by a nerve condition in his hip, will have more runs to work with because of the acquisition of Torre and a stronger defense behind him because of the acquisition of centerfielder Del Unser.

The problem, however, is that on those days when Seaver or Jon Matlack or Jerry Koosman or any New York starter is unable to go nine, there is no longer a Tug McGraw to offer relief.

And also, while the 34-year old Torre does figure to strengthen the offense, it is not certain he can play third well enough to alleviate New York's chronic agony at that position.

The muscular Torre played first base during his last two summers with the Cardinals and would move back to that position if he is unable to handle third. Such a move would create a series of new problems for the Mets.

It would prompt the return of erratic third baseman Wayne Garrett and send first baseman John Milner to the outfield, disrupting manager Yogi Berra's plans to start a unit of Cleon Jones in left, Unser in center and Rusty Staub in right.

With Jones healthy after October knee surgery and Staub having had a winter to recover from a hand injury that plagued him throughout the '74 season, this was to be the year that Berra could stay with three regular outfielders.

JERRY GROTE doesn't often hit for a high average, but is Mets' leading receiver because of his defensive skills.

And it is likely he can if Torre stays at third, which would also give the Mets a set infield of Milner at first, Felix Millan (.268) at second, Bud Harrelson (.227) at short and Jerry Grote (.257) behind the plate.

While Torre, who hit .282 with 70 RBI, is the key to the regular lineup, the Mets, at least, have ways to turn if he is unable to play third.

However, the options are not as evident when it comes to the pitching, especially the relief pitching.

The talented, ebullient McGraw, plagued suddenly by back problems, was traded to Philadelphia, along with outfielders Don Hahn and Dave Schneck for Unser, relief pitcher Mac Scarce and catcher John Stearns.

Another relief pitcher Ray Sadecki, along with pitching prospect Tommy Moore, was traded to St. Louis for Torre.

What the Mets are left with in the bullpen is a series of question marks, unproven pitchers named Scarce, Apodaca, Swann, Parker and Webb.

The tenuous nature of the relief pitching is compounded by the absence of a fourth starter once that Seaver, Koosman (15-11) and Matlack (13-15) have taken their turns. George Stone (2-7) was No. 4 over the first half of '74 but did not pitch after hurting his arm in July.

There is irony here in that the pitching depth which was always the Mets trademark is now found at other positions. In the outfield, for example, the Mets have a new second line of Gene Clines (obtained from Pittsburgh for Duffy Dyer), Bob Gallagher (obtained from Houston for Ken Boswell) and Jorge Roque (drafted from Puebla of the Mexican League).

The bench also features a new utility infielder in Jack Heidemann (obtained from St. Louis for Teddy Martinez) and a reserve catcher Jerry Moses, who came to the Mets on a trial basis from Detroit. Moses, who caught 74 games for the Tigers last season, joins Ron Hodges who caught 59 for the Mets.

FELIX MILLAN argues with Umpire DAVE DAVIDSON that he's been hit on arm as STEVE YEAGER watches.

RUSTY STAUB had 19 HRs, 78 RBI last year despite his many injuries.

MONTREAL EXPOS

In the last month of a disappointing season, the Expos were 18-5 while employing mostly youngsters. That success helped influence a team that had been trying to win with veterans that it's future rested with the young.

It is for that reason that the Expos were very active in the winter trading market and went to spring training with only three positions set, specifically first base, shortstop and catcher.

The catcher will be Barry Foote, 23, a .262 hitter as a rookie. The first baseman will be Mike Jorgensen, 26, a .310 hitter in a platoon role, a lefthanded swinger who will now play against all pitching. The shortstop will be the volatile Tim Foli, 24, a .254 hitter.

The only other certainty about Montreal is that it will rain in April.

Centerfielder Willie Davis and rightfielder Ken Singleton were both traded. So was infielder-outfielder Ron Fairly. Another infielder-outfielder, Bob Bailey, returns, but will be employed only in a utility role.

Davis went to Texas for infielder Pete Mackanin and pitcher Don Stanhouse. Singleton and pitcher Mike Torrez went to Baltimore for pitcher Dave McNally and outfielder Rich Coggins. Fairly went to St. Louis for infielders Rudy Kinard and Ed Kurpiel. The Expos also traded catcher Terry Humphrey and pitcher Tom Walker to Detroit for pitcher Woody Fryman.

The result is a predetermined rotation and wide open races at each of the outfield positions and both second and third base.

Larry Lintz, 25, Jim Cox, 24, and Mackanin, 24, will vie at second with Mackanin also in the running at third, where Larry Parrish, up from Quebec City, is considered the leading candidate.

The 24-year old Coggins, who hit .319 as a Baltimore rookie before slumping to .243 last year, will be given first crack at centerfield. The Expos are hopeful that Pepe Mangual, 23, and Gary Carter, 21, both up from the minors, will join Coggins in an outfield that is backed up by Bailey and three other rookies, Jerry White, Tony Scott and Warren Cromartie.

The pitching could be good if there is some consistency to the offense and defense. Each of the four starters won in double figures last year and has a chance to improve. McNally (16-10) joins Steve Rogers (15-22), Dennis Blair (11-7) and Steve Renko (12-16) in the rotation. Fryman is ticketed for spot starts. The Expos believe they are solid in the bullpen with Chuck Taylor, John Montague and Dale Murray, who saved 10 games and won one in September.

The good fortune of that final month relieved some of the pain from a season the Expos entered with the belief they could win a division title. They fell 8½ games short, however, and after six years have yet to finish at .500 or above.

CHICAGO CUBS

With the departure of Billy Williams, the Cubs have only Don Kessinger remaining from the team that was a factor in the East throughout the late 60s and early 70s.

They began breaking up the old gang after the fifth place finish of '73 and the immediate result was disaster. The no-name Cubs of '74 finished last, 30 games under .500 and 22 games behind the Pirates.

And it is unlikely that the Cubs will improve much this year.

The critical problem is with the pitching. The Cubs finished next-to-last in team ERA last year with Rick Reuschel (13-12) the closest thing to an ace. Reuschel is back, along with Bill Bonham (11-22), Steve Stone (8-6) and Tom Dettore (3-5).

That looms as the Chicago rotation unless Burt Hooton (7-11) or Jim Todd (4-2) moves one of the others out. The bullpen should be stronger with Bob Locker (who did not pitch in '74), Darold Knowles (also obtained in the Williams deal) and Oscar Zamora (10 saves).

The Cubs are solid only in the outfield. Jerry Morales (.273) starts in left, Rick Monday (.294) in center and Jose Cardenal (.293) in right. Behind those three are an untested trio of Gene Hiser, Jim Tyrone and Chris Ward.

The infield is set on the left side and a question mark on the right. Kessinger is back at short with the very promising Bill Madlock at third. Madlock hit .313 as a rookie and fielded well.

The first baseman for the moment is Andy Thornton, who hit .261 with 10 homers as a rookie. His competition comes from Peter LaCock, who can also play the outfield. At second, the Cubs have a multiple choice. The candidates are Manny Trillo, who also came in the Williams transaction, Bill Gra-barkewitz, Vic Harris, Ron Dunn, Rob Sperring and Dave Rosello. Their recent credentials are underwhelming.

The catcher will be Steve Swisher, a .214 hitter in his rookie year, only his second as a pro. Swisher, 23, Madlock, 24, and Thornton, 25, are characteristic of the direction the Cubs are headed. Unfortunately, it hasn't been determined if that's up or down.

The addition of Trillo and Knowles as major parts of the locally unpopular trade of Williams to the A's probably holds the key to the Cubs' escape from the cellar. Trillo, a lanky infielder who couldn't elbow into the Oakland lineup, has second base all his own to lose, arrived with rave notices from winter ball in Venezuela.

Knowles, who says Manny can hit "if he plays," has high hopes for himself as well. "I didn't get enough work last year," he said after three wins, three losses, and three saves in an A's bullpen that upstaged him with Rollie Fingers and Paul Lindblad.

With the Cubs, he'll get all the work he wants, and his sinker may be just the ticket in cozy Wrigley Field.

The Cubs have a whole new coaching staff, including Irv Noren, who is another displaced member of the A's, and Marv Grissom, a pitching tutor lured from retirement to put some discipline into a mound staff that ought to be better than it is.

WEST

LOS ANGELES DODGERS

Amid the champagne and the shaving cream in the Houston clubhouse on the night that the Dodgers clinched the Western Division title, leftfielder Bill Buckner said the Dodgers would rule the West for at least five straight years.

Buckner's opinion does not seem farfetched, but the ability to take the second of those five steps

BILL MADLOCK (left), third baseman, and outfielders RICK MONDAY, JERRY MORALES and JOSE CARDENAL were the Cubs' leading hitters last season and are the team's big hopes to rise out of the NL's East basement this year.

JIM WYNN helped Dodgers win NL pennant last season with 32 HRs and 108 RBI in first year with Los Angeles Club.

JOE FERGUSON is versatile Dodger, catching and playing right field equally well; he also is a reliable hitter.

would appear to hinge more on two veterans than on all of the club's touted young players.

The two are centerfielder Jimmy Wynn and pitcher Tommy John.

Wynn, 33, enjoyed an inspired season after his acquisition from Houston in exchange for pitcher Claude Osteen. He hit .271, drove in 108 runs and belted 32 homers. He also made only three errors and played with an enthusiasm that brought him the plaudits of Los Angeles fans who dearly loved his successor in center, Willie Davis.

Wynn did it all despite a bone chip in his right elbow. The condition created persistent pain and inhibited Wynn's ability to throw. The chips were surgically removed in October and Dr. Frank Jobe said that Wynn would be 100% by the season's start.

If, however, Wynn is unable to throw with the fire expected of a centerfielder, forcing him to shift to either left or rightfield, then the club's delicate balance is in jeopardy. The Dodgers are without another proven centerfielder and manager Alston might be forced to move shortstop Bill Russell, who last played the outfield three years ago, to Wynn's position with an untested rookie, Ivan DeJesus, taking over at short.

As for John, 32, he was 13-3 in mid-July when he ruptured a ligament in his left elbow. The injury sidelined the southpaw for the remainder of the season and he underwent a serious operation in September. Dr. Jobe removed a tendon from John's right forearm and sewed it into his left elbow in the hope that it would replace the damaged ligament. Dr. Jobe admitted that hope was all he could give John, whose absence, of course, would seriously impair the club's celebrated pitching.

The work of Don Sutton (19-9) and Andy Mesersmith (20-6), parlayed to the remarkable relief machine that is Mike Marshall (106 appearances, 15 wins, 21 saves and the Cy Young Award), enabled the Dodgers to overcome John's loss during the second half.

But without John over the course of a full summer, there is no obvious replacement, not to mention a fourth starter should a replacement for John be found.

Among those getting first crack will be Doug Rau, who was 13-11 but pitched inconsistently during the second half; Geoff Zahn, 3-5 as both spot starter and spot reliever, and Al Downing, 5-6 as a seldom used starter.

Also among the candidates are knuckleballer Charlie Hough, who previously has been used only in relief, and two righthanders up from Albuquerque: Rick Rhoden and Rex Hudson.

Aside from Wynn and John, the Dodgers seem set. MVP Steve Garvey (.312 with 111 RBI) is at first, Davey Lopes (.266) at second, Russell (.269) at short and Ron Cey (.262 with 97 RBI) at third. Steve Yeager (.266) and Joe Ferguson (.252), baseball's top 1-2 catching punch, will alternate. The plan calls for Yeager to catch and Ferguson to platoon with rightfielder Willie Crawford (.295) against southpaw pitching.

The leftfielder is Bill Buckner, who hit .314, played defense spectacularly and at 25 would seem ready to finish among the league's top 10 batters for many seasons.

The Dodgers led the league in team ERA (2.97) and finished second in team batting (.272) and an often-overlooked facet is one of the league's strongest benches. It is built primarily around Manny Mota and Ken McMullen but also includes Tom Paciorek and Lee Lacy. The latter two, young and dissatisfied, have asked to be traded and have been told they will be if an equitable deal can be arranged.

CINCINNATI REDS

The new season would seem to be a pivotal one for the dreaded Big Red Machine, which must re-establish its status as No. 1 or, perhaps, give-way to the Dodgers and the other Western contenders for several seasons.

It hasn't really showed yet, but a certain amount of age is creeping up on the Reds. Pete Rose and Clay Carroll are 34. Tony Perez is 33. Joe Morgan is 31.

The Reds persistently pursued the Dodgers through the summer of '74 and were unable to catch up as they had in September of '73. That failure is likely to weigh on the Reds, just as the success is likely to provide the Dodgers with added confidence.

The mental aspect is significant since the physical difference between the two teams is small. It is mostly in the pitching, where the Dodgers, with a healthy John, appear stronger.

The Reds will go with the same rotation as last year: Jack Billingham (19-11), Don Gullett (17-11), Clay Kirby (12-9) and Fred Norman (13-12). The bullpen, basically, is Carroll and Pedro Borbon, but the two workhorses should get relief from Rawly Eastwick, a 24-year-old righthander who was 8-7 at Indianapolis and then saved two games for the Reds in September.

FRED NORMAN, little left-hander, won 13 games and lost 12 with 3.15 ERA for Cincinnati Reds during 1974 season.

Cincinnati's management is extremely high on two Dominican pitchers, Santo Alcala, 22, and Joaquin Andujar, 23, but both may be a year away.

There is another pitcher the Reds are not counting on this year but are hopeful he just might be ready. He's Gary Nolan, the one-time ace, a man who has not really pitched for two years because of arm miseries that may have been alleviated with the removal of a calcium deposit from his right shoulder last summer. Nolan, 27, still has youth on his side and his return would provide the Reds with a tremendous lift, emotionally as well as physically.

JOE MORGAN, the Reds' hustling second baseman, had a big year in 1974, .293 average, 22 homers and 58 steals.

JACK BILLINGHAM, crafty right-hander, barely missed 20-victory mark last season, winning 19 games for Cincinnati.

The lift, in the meantime, must continue to come from the top of the batting order, from the super-charged duo of Rose and Morgan. Rose "slumped" some last year, batting .284, and the Reds admitted quietly this winter that they can only hope that age hasn't cut into Charlie Hustle's fire.

Rose remains the generator for a lineup that will not be much different than last year's. The big man is catcher Johnny Bench, who belted 33 homers and drove in 129 runs, and will probably have to appear in 160 games again.

The rest of the infield finds Perez (28 homers and 101 RBI) at first, Morgan (.293 and 22 homers) at second, the brilliant Dave Concepcion (.281 and 82 RBI) at short and a void at third. Manager Sparky Anderson has decided that he can't risk Dan Driessen's glove at the hot corner. Driessen, who hit .281 last year and fielded .915, the lowest mark among the league's regular third basemen, will move to right.

"I'm not sure what we're going to do at third," says Anderson, "but we may do the same thing Oakland did with their second base situation a couple years ago. That is I'll use two or three a game and pinch-hit a lot."

The "two or three" would be John Vukovich, purchased from Milwaukee, Darrel Chaney, and Ray Knight, a rookie up from Indianapolis. President Bob Howsam believes he has a potential "superstar" in 21-year old infielder Arturo DeFreites, but DeFreites is coming off a season in which he broke both an ankle and wrist and will be given another summer at triple A.

The Cincinnati outfield finds Rose in left, Cesar Geronimo (.281) in center and either Driessen, Ken Griffey, George Foster or Merv Rettenmund in right. The Reds are also high on two rookie outfielders: Joel Youngblood and Tom Spencer, both 23.

PETE ROSE had a comparative off-season in 1974, hitting only .284, but he didn't lose any of his aggressiveness.

JOHNNY BENCH, baseball's top catcher, was Cincinnati's best hitter last season, with 33 home runs and 129 RBI.

ATLANTA BRAVES

The question of whether manager Clyde King can handle Dick Allen is at this point academic since there may not be an Allen to handle. We probably won't know until the first week of the season if Allen is sincere about his August retirement or will be lured back by his love for the game and willingness to put up with $250,000 in salary.

It would seem a shame if Allen doesn't give himself at least one year amid the inviting confines of Atlanta Stadium. The ball not only travels well in Atlanta, it doesn't have far to travel. Allen led the American League with 32 homers last year and didn't play the last five weeks.

Should he report, Allen will play first base for a team that must find a new leftfielder for the first time in 20 years. The Braves may not be sure about Allen but they know definitely that Henry Aaron won't be around. Unhappy with the front office position offered him by the Braves, Aaron decided he wanted to play another year and was traded to Milwaukee, where his career began. In exchange for the all-time home run king, Atlanta received Davey May, who is just 661 homers behind Aaron's career total of 733.

May will be only a utility man for the Braves, who displayed the league's best record after the All-Star break and improved in a number of statistical categories. The Braves finished last in the league in both team ERA and defense in 1973 but finished second in both departments in '74.

Naturally, if the improvement is to continue, much depends on Allen's presence. He would join an infield that includes second baseman Marty Perez, who tied Tommy Helms for the league's best defensive percentage, shortstop Craig Robinson and third baseman Darrell Evans, who had 25 homers and 79 RBI and called it a bad year.

JOHNNY OATES, Braves' catcher, bangs into net while chasing foul pop, but holds onto ball despite losing balance.

The catcher will be 28-year old Vic Correll, who took over from Johnny Oates when King replaced Eddie Mathews as the manager. Correll caught 49 games and the Braves won 33. How long he remains No. 1, however, depends on the development of 21-year old Biff Pocoroba, whom the Braves believe is the best young catcher in baseball. Pocoroba batted .311 at Savannah last year.

The outfield features the exciting Ralph Garr, who won the league batting title with a .353 average, which the Braves would also like to see Garr maintain with his glove. Dusty Baker, a fine young talent who may be more at ease with Aaron gone, will also start, along with either Mike Lum or Rowland Office. The latter is a 22-year old speed merchant who has many of Garr's characteristics except that he can field. The dependable Lum will play first if Allen doesn't report.

Atlanta's pitching was a surprise commodity last year with Buzz Capra (16-8) and Phil Niekro (20-13) ranking 1-2 in the league's ERA derby. Carl Morton (16-12) and Ron Reed (10-11) also won in double figures. Roric Harrison (6-11), who underwent winter knee surgery, and Jamie Easterly, a 22-year old southpaw who was 9-6 at Richmond, will be given a chance to break into the rotation.

A nine-game winning streak by Capra was credited with turning Atlanta's pitching around, but also influential was the development of southpaw reliever Tom House, who won 6, saved 11 and recorded a 1.98 ERA in 56 appearances.

House's arrival prompted the Braves to trade righthanded relief pitcher Danny Frisella to San Diego for utility outfielder Clarence Gaston.

It is difficult to say how the team will react to the absence of Aaron, but the feeling is that it will be better off. No longer will the Braves' concentration be interrupted by the hoopla surrounding each of his homers. Nor will the lineup remain a mystery until the last minute when Aaron decides if he is going to play. Allen, of course, would present a whole new series of eccentricities, but the difference is that Allen is eight years younger than Aaron and most looks it when he is swinging the bat.

RALPH GARR won National League batting title with .353 average for Atlanta.

DICK ALLEN, one of game's top sluggers, has joined the Atlanta Braves this year.

PHIL NIEKRO, Braves' knuckleballer, won 20 games last year and led NL in complete games and innings pitched.

HOUSTON ASTROS

One can look at Cesar Cedenó's statistics (.269 average, 26 homers and 102 RBI) and conclude that the centerfielder's career wasn't affected by his involuntary shooting of a teenage girl in the Dominican Republic during the winter prior to the 1974 season.

It is a dangerous conclusion, however, for tragedy can stay with a man in many ways.

The Houston Astros faced it in a different form again this spring and it is impossible to know how it will affect their performance over the course of the summer.

The death of Don Wilson deprived the team of a starting pitcher and a man who had been a Houston fixture for nine years. It may be accurate to report that he had never fulfilled his potential, but it is also true that he won in double figures every year.

The physical and emotional loss would figure to damage the chances of a team that is annually considered a favorite in the West and annually finishes a disappointment.

To start with, pitching was not Houston's longest suit. Wilson was to be a starter in a rotation that also included Dave Roberts (10-12), Larry Dierker (11-10) and Tom Griffin (14-10). If the Astros are to replace Wilson from within, the leading candidates are James Rodney Richard, the erratic fireballer who was 2-3 in 15 appearances with the Astros, and Paul Siebert, a 22-year-old lefthander who was 16-7 at Columbus.

There is also the strong possibility that with a surplus of talent at second base the Astros will deal for a pitcher by offering veteran Tommy Helms.

The Astros created a traffic jam at second when they first traded Bob Gallagher to the Mets for utility second baseman Ken Boswell and then dealt Lee May to Baltimore for highly-touted second base prospect Rob Andrews and utility infielder-outfielder Enos Cabell. So not only are Helms, Andrews and Boswell backed up at second, but the Astros also have Larry Milbourne, a 24-year-old righthanded hitter who batted .279 in 112 games with Houston last year.

It is Andrews, however, who has the Houston management excited. General manager Spec Richardson said he was willing to part with May because he felt that (a) Andrews was the best young infielder in baseball and (b) Cabell the best utility man.

Andrews, 22, the brother of former big league infielder Mike Andrews, batted .306 at Rochester last year and was expendable only because Baltimore already has Bobby Grich ahead of him. So instead of a long wait, Andrews is now expected to join a Houston infield of third baseman Doug Rader (.257), shortstop Roger Metzger (.253) and first baseman Bob Watson (.298), who will move in from left field to replace May.

The outfield will include Cedenó, Greg Gross (who hit .314 to win Rookie of the Year laurels) and either Cabell, Cliff Johnson (who numbered 10 homers among his 39 hits) or Jose Cruz, who was purchased from St. Louis.

The catcher will be Milt May, who batted .289 in ending Houston's long search for a catcher.

The search for a replacement for Wilson could extend no further than the Astros' bullpen if manager Preston Gomez was willing to return Ken Forsch to the starting ranks. But considering Forsch's 70 appearances, 8 wins and 10 saves, it is likely he will remain in relief. Lefthander Fred Scherman, who underwent successful back surgery during the winter, is expected to keep righthander Forsch company in the bullpen.

DOUG RADER, mainstay for Houston at third base, belted 17 homers, drove in 78 runs and batted .257 last season.

SAN FRANCISCO

Willie Mays is gone and so is the man who was supposed to be the next Mays. The trading of Bobby Bonds was a surprise, but the likelihood is that it will work out best for Bonds and for the team that traded him. There was pressure for Bonds with the Giants and, in turn, there was pressure for the Giants. No matter what he did it might not have been good enough.

Bobby Murcer, who was obtained from the Yankees in exchange for Bonds, is no stranger to that kind of pressure. If Bonds was to be the next Mays, Murcer was to be the next Mantle. He could never escape the shadow as long as he remained with the Yankees, and, perhaps, it is something that will remain with both Bonds and Murcer throughout their careers.

There is the feeling, however, that in the new environment the pressure will not be as intense, that Murcer may be compared to Bonds, and Bonds to Murcer, but that both can live with a comparison that is within reason.

In trading for Murcer, the Giants said they wanted a lefthanded hitter. Murcer will bat third and help form a 3-M outfield with Gary Matthews (.287) and Garry Maddox (.284). This was potentially baseball's best outfield with Bonds and it remains that with Murcer.

Bonds' role as the leadoff hitter will be taken by second baseman Derrel Thomas, who came from San Diego in exchange for Tito Fuentes. Thomas, 24, is a switch-hitter and swift runner and may be moving up on the stardom predicted for him.

Thomas' infield associates will be Ed Goodson (.272) at first, Chris Speier (.250) at short and either Steve Ontiveros (.265), Dave Kingman (.223), Mike Phillips (.219) or a player yet to be obtained at third. It is a problem position that neither Kingman, Ontiveros or Phillips seem equipped to handle.

The catcher will be Dave Rader, who batted .291

GARRY MADDOX, a line drive hitter with a .284 average, is one-third of the San Francisco Giants' "3-M" outfield.

CESAR CEDENO was big run producer for Astros in 1974, 102 RBI, 26 homers.

LARRY DIERKER won only 11 games for Houston in '74 in spite of 2.89 ERA.

TOM GRIFFIN engineered a major comeback last year with a fine 14-10 record.

with 1 homer and 26 RBI, or 23-year-old Marc Hill, obtained from St. Louis for Elias Sosa. Hill hit .278 with 14 homers and 58 RBI for Tulsa and was named the American Assn.'s Rookie of the Year.

Pitching has been a San Francisco liability in recent summers but the current staff is not without potential. The Giants would seem to have three adequate starters in Mike Caldwell (14-5), John D'Acquisto (12-14) and Jim Barr (13-9).

Tom Bradley (8-11) is the likely No. 4, but the Giants are hopeful that Ron Bryant (3-15) can regain the stuff with which he won 24 games and the Cy Young Award in '73. John Montefusco, 24, is another candidate. He was 8-9 at Amarillo, 7-3 at Phoenix and 3-2 with the Giants in September, including a win over the Dodgers.

With Sosa gone, the bullpen burden falls almost entirely on Randy Moffitt, who appeared in 61 games last year, winning 5 and saving 15. Gary Lavelle, a 26-year-old lefthander up from Phoenix, is also being counted on for relief.

The Giants last year finished fifth in the West. They were 72-90 and 30 games behind the Dodgers. The difference in playing personnel, however, would not seem that great and the Giants should be a factor if their pitching responds.

SAN DIEGO PADRES

There was a new look to the Padres last year. It was seen in the owner's box, in the starting lineup, in the bank account and in the intangible area of spirit.

Unfortunately, there was nothing new as far as San Diego's finish in the standings.

The Padres were last in the West for the sixth straight year. Their record of 60-102 was identical to 1973's. They finished 12th in the league in ERA (4.58) and batting average (.229) and were 10th in team fielding.

The only improvement seemed to be at the turnstiles. The Padres drew 1,075,401, a dramatic rise from 611,286.

However, it is difficult to predict improvement in any area in 1975. The Padres were active in the winter trading market, but it is doubtful the new acquisitions will permit the Padres to forge a significant change in the power structure of baseball's toughest division.

San Diego remains a strange mixture of age and inexperience, a team whose pitching is highly suspect.

BOBBY MURCER, outfielder acquired from Yankees, is being counted upon by Giants to add left-handed batting power.

MIKE CALDWELL was pleasant surprise for Giants last year, compiling 14-5 record.

GARY MATTEWS hit solid .297 for Giants in 1974, with 16 HRs and 82 RBI.

It is the Padres' hope that a stronger bullpen and defense will add to the confidence of a rotation that does not include a starter over 28 or a winner of more than nine games last year.

San Diego attempted to do something about its pitching by first obtaining reliever Danny Frisella from Atlanta and then negotiating an eight-player trade with the Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Cardinals.

The Padres sent the disappointing Nate Colbert to Detroit for shortstop Eddie Brinkman, outfielder Dick Sharon and pitcher Bruce Strampe. The Padres then traded Brinkman to St. Louis for pitchers Sonny Siebert, Alan Foster and Rich Folkers.

All of the new pitchers will be with the Padres this season except for Strampe.

The bullpen would seem stronger with Folkers, Frisella and Siebert expected to join Randy Jones, Vicente Romo and Joe McIntosh.

The 28-year old Foster, who was 7-10 with St. Louis, steps into a rotation of 23-year old Dan Spillner (9-11), 24-year old Dave Freisleben (9-14) and 23-year old Bill Grief (9-19).

The quartet's combined record last year was 34-54, which is not likely to relieve the indigestion of owner Ray Kroc, the hamburger king.

Behind the questionable pitching, the San Diego attack hinges primarily on the development of young outfielders Dave Winfield and Johnny Grubb and third baseman Dave Roberts.

They are not without promise.

Winfield, 23, hammered 20 homers with 75 RBI last year. Grubb, 26, a .311 hitter as a rookie, fought off injuries and the sophomore jinx to bat .286. Roberts, 24, slipped from .286 as a rookie to a confidence-sapping .167, but the Padres are hopeful that a winter-long diet will restore Roberts' snap.

Leftfielder Winfield and centerfielder Grubb will start next to veteran rightfielder Bobby Tolan. Roberts' infield associates will include Willie McCovey at first, Tito Fuentes at second, Enzo Hernandez at short and Fred Kendall behind the plate. Fuentes was obtained from San Francisco for Derrel Thomas and figures to strengthen both defense and offense, giving San Diego a reliable pivot on the double play and a knowledgeable No. 2 hitter.

The only rookie given much chance of playing a significant role in 1975 is shortstop Bill Almon, San Diego's first round draft choice out of Brown University. The Padres believe that Almon, will not require minor league seasoning and could even be starting by the second half.

Tolan and McCovey will platoon some at first with Sharon playing the outfield when Tolan isn't. The reliable veteran, Glenn Beckert, having recovered from an ankle injury, can relieve either Fuentes or Roberts.

DAVE WINFIELD, slugging outfielder with 20 HRs and 75 RBI in 1974, represents San Diego's big hope for future.

TITO FUENTES, slick second baseman, was obtained by San Diego Padres in winter trade with San Francisco Giants.

DAN SPILLNER (left), young righty, and veteran outfielder BOBBY TOLAN typify Padres' mix of youth and experience.

Suicide Squeeze

Hank Aaron, Lou Brock, Nolan Ryan and Al Kaline had finished their acts. The country had seen everything, home runs, stolen bases, strikeouts, wholesale hits and dug into the pop corn, just to watch a parcel of sluggers and pitching aces go at it in the World Series. Reggie Jackson had cleared the wall in the second inning and everything was moving along normally when all of a sudden the status quo was shaken by the grand daddy of baseball suspense—the suicide squeeze.

In the sixth inning, Oakland leading 1-0, Ken Holtzman on third, nobody out, count 2 and 2, Bert Campaneris bunts towards the box, Holtzman scores. Manager Alvin Dark had started the squeeze, by first flashing third base coach Bobby Winkles to whisper the order to Holtzman. "I was a little surprised when I got the bunt sign," Campaneris related.

It isn't that anybody was dumbfounded about the suicide squeeze, but it was like an airplane had zoomed over Dodger Stadium spraying paprika. The participants and patrons were on their toes the rest of the series.

Of all the tricks of the trade, the suicide squeeze starts more arguments, makes every fan a strategist, catches victims flat footed, plunges individuals, teams and rooters into chagrin and exults the team that got off the hook with a warm wave of relief and self congratulation.

You commit suicide if you blow it. A runner on third base is like a handful of trumps, a ticket on a long shot galloping towards the wire three lengths ahead. You are taking an awful chance, risking the family fortune. The poignancy throbs faster than for any play in the game and the odds are, it won't work. The crowd gapes like people in the street gawking at a figure threatening to jump off the building ledge.

Which was the most exciting team last year? Would you object to the Texas Rangers, from sixth to second place? They sprang eleven runners from third base with this weapon, employed by manager Billy Martin with the comparative skill of Perry Mason.

The Rangers made 81 sacrifices last season, 40 more than the Detroit Tigers for instance. They are taught how to lay 'em down and are equally adept making tracks home. There isn't an instant hesitation, everybody knows what he is doing including Frank Luchessi, coaching at third base who acts as though his mind is on something else.

Joe Lovitto, with no background as a bunter, sprang the first successful Rangers' squeeze on May 18 in the sixth inning at Kansas City, delivering Lenny Randle who had tripled.

Eleven days later, rookie Jim Sundberg who had done a smattering of bunting at Pittsfield, in the Eastern League, laid one down perfectly in the seventh inning, as Larry Brown scooted home from third like a striped mongoose, for a 3-0 victory delighting the Texas fans.

About a month later, Jim Spencer, who knew how, bunted to the pitcher to squeeze Jeff Burroughs from third base in the fourth inning during a 12-3 rout of his former California Angels.

A squeeze bunter is a prominent person and Spencer, first baseman and designated hitter was interviewed. "Billy has us ready for certain situations, such as being in a slump and one run looks big; it can jar you out of it. Sometimes of course you are trying to beat it out. And the other side is uncertain." So here were the Rangers with three fat runs squeezed home before mid-season, a confident band and unafraid to use the insidious weapon that had begun to arouse the league.

It was June 26, the White Sox were at Texas and in the sixth inning, with Mike Hargrove on third, the crowd poised. Would Martin exercise the new Texas specialty? Randle, who had scored the first squeeze in May, this time was the batter. Lenny had made just one sacrifice the year before but by now the Californian was bright-eyed about this exciting strategy and was tickled to death when his bunt evaded the Chicago defense and rookie Hargrove flashed home.

Now came the climax of the Texans' extraordinary defiance of suicide. When you jump six feet, you raise the bar and try to top it. So Randle and the Rangers, now that they had four squeeze bunts in the bag, set themselves another goal—two in one game.

In the eighth inning the same situation confronted the White Sox as Texas rooters strained in anticipation. Hargrove was on third base and Randle at bat.

BILLY MARTIN, getting nowhere with umpire MERLE ANTHONY, engineered Rangers' 81 sacrifices in '74.

Many suicide squeezes are a surprise but here was one that would be a surprise if he didn't bunt. The Texans had become downright notorious for reckless scorn of percentage. Randle bunted expertly and Hargrove was across the plate. Have you ever heard of the same pair operating a squeeze bunt twice in a game? This one brought Randle's season score to date to two squeezes and one score, himself.

Two days later Sundberg, now somewhat of a celebrity as one of Martin's squeezer task force, stepped up in the third inning with Toby Harrah on third base. Kansas City, victim of a Texas squeeze in May, was alert, still they couldn't do anything about it. The Royals don't go in for the art, and had to watch Sundberg perform his second successful rescue from suicide as he brought in his shortstop teammate.

A month later, Harrah was on third again in the fourth inning, at Detroit. Dave Nelson, a cracker-jack bunter totaling 20 sacrifices the previous two seasons, carpeted the ball and Harrah, a six-footer who rides horses and motorcycles, got a big bang out of bringing in another. But the West Virginian was just getting started. In the tenth inning, who should be perched on third base but Randle and who at bat but Harrah. Did he bunt? Of course he did and Randle streaked home, Texas winning, 6-4.

Familiar names popped up through the rest of the season. Sundberg squeezed Randle home in the second inning, September 7 as Oakland fans got a look at the Texas demolition team that had become famous for its death defying squeeze bunts. Score Texas 8, Oakland 2.

A week later, the A's visited Texas. In the sixth inning, Randle was on third, where this .300-hitting keystone seems to find his way quite regularly. Hargrove, who had scored twice on bunts by Randle on July 26, now was on the squeezing end. Texas won, 8-3.

Hargrove plated the final squeezed run on September 22 to the glee of Ranger fans who hardly can again expect to see so many rescues from suicide. This time a new bunter got into the act—Roy Lee Howell. Hargrove got to third base in the sixth inning and wouldn't you know, scored on Howell's bunt. Kansas City, victims twice before, knew full well what was coming but couldn't do anything about it.

Adding it all up at season's end, the Rangers won all eleven games in which Billy Martin's death defying troupe put on its thrill circus.

Big names in the bunting world are Felix Millan, who put down 24 for the Mets last year and 18 the season before; Ted Sizemore of St. Louis, 18 in 1974, BERT CAMPANERIS looking at A's 3rd base coach for sign, executed 11 bunts in 1974 season.

LENNY RANDALL tapped down 16 sacrifice bunts in Rangers' '74 campaign.

FELIX MILLAN of Mets made 24 sacrifice bunts last year, 95 lifetime.

25 the previous year; Larry Lintz, one of Montreal's bunting squadron, 23, and 14 the year before; Bucky Dent, the White Sox shortstop who helped keep the art alive in the American League with 23, and 14 in 1973; Mark Belanger, Earl Weaver's main bunting weapon, good for 35 the last two seasons; Houston's Roger Metzger, 21 and a dozen in 1973; Tony Fuentes, always in double figures the last five campaigns; Larry Bowa of Philadelphia, who was given his head by Danny Ozark and spread 20 on the rug last year and Campaneris who didn't bunt until Dick Williams took over the A's, in 1971. Williams' California Angels led the AL with 82 sacs last year.

A fellow can't set out on a career as a squeeze bunter because a lot of managers don't go for it. Play for Gene Mauch at Montreal and you will learn to bunt. Gene goes for it big, always in double figures. Last year the Expos made 106 sacrifices, bringing their five-year total to 528.

Atlanta, Mets, Cubs and San Diego will bunt on you but opponents know when they play Montreal the infield will have to be ready constantly, Mauch is likely to give the sign at the least provocation.

Everything was set for one of Gene's specialties in Houston last August 9. The Expos had Barry Foote on third, Ken Forsch was pitching. Ron Hunt (now with the Cardinals) who responded to Mauch's signals for three seasons, sprang the trap, bringing in his man.

The Mets, in Jarry Park at Montreal had a problem. With Larry Lintz on third base for the Expos and Tim Foli, formerly with the Mets, at bat, they knew exactly what Foli was up to. But a successful bunted ball is deadly, there was nothing the New Yorkers could do about it, the ball rolled for a safe hit and RBI.

Yogi Berra's side had their day with the magic play, August 26 at Shea Stadium, Houston ahead 4-3, ninth inning, Teddy Martinez on third, Bud Harrelson on first, one out. Yogi told Millan to bunt and wig-wagged coach Eddie Yost at third, who instructed Martinez to streak home on the first pitch. Preston Gomez was bringing in reliever Ken Forsch so it wasn't conspicuous for the Mets to be talking. Forsch, a squeeze victim earlier in the month was no match for Millan, a master of the short game, who waited until the last instant to stroke the outside fast ball past the incoming pitcher and second baseman as Martinez crossed the plate with the tying run. Rusty Staub won the sweet win, knocking in Harrelson.

It was a toughie for Houston. They had seized the lead in the fourth inning on a suicide squeeze, by Greg Gross, off Jerry Koosman. Millan, who often chokes the bat commented "I am always in position to bunt. What I wanted here was a piece of the ball and no fly." Koosman, the winner sighed "You get more experience executing it than you do defending against it."

Dent, the White Sox' live one, who out-bunted the AL with 23, pulled three dandies last mid-summer, after having led three minor leagues in sacrifices. The Georgian came to bat at Milwaukee, July 9 with Bill Sharp on third in the second inning. Manager Chuck Tanner said lay it down and Dent

BUCKY DENT, White Sox shortstop, had 14 sacrifice hits in 1973 and paced American League with 23 in 1974.

GENE MAUCH, Expos manager, believes bunting is a way of life in the majors and has figures to prove it.

did, starting a four run rumpus. Oakland was at Comiskey Park August 1 when Dent squeezed Brian Downing over, the third run of the inning, as the Sox won 7-3. At Shea Stadium August 18 the same scene was set as Dent squeezed Downing home again, though they lost 9-4.

Adoption of the designated hitter in 1973 put AL pitchers out of the sacrifice business. Most were clever at it. Mickey Lolich used to lay 'em down, Fritz Peterson, Wilbur Wood, Dave McNally and Palmer, to name a few. In 1972 the American League out-sacrificed the National, 893 to 865. But in 1973, the ninth batter in the lineup wasn't there to bunt and the Americans dropped to 592 while the Nationals made 958 safe sacrifices. This 301 drop in safe bunts was something for the owners to think about—was it wise to disturb the structure of the game this drastically?

Last year, thanks to the Angels and Rangers, there were 751 AL sacrifices. The NL had a high time of it with 983, as pitchers like Jack Billingham, Larry Dierker, Jim Lonberg and Jon Matlack made eleven sacrifices apiece. Carl Morton of Atlanta made a dozen. Don Gullett and Jerry Koosman each sacrificed safely ten times. All over the NL hurlers were busy bunting—Dave Freisleben, Bill Grief, Tom Griffin, Tommy John, Phil Niekro, Rickey Reuschel, Don Sutton and many more, while AL pitchers remained in the dugout and bullpen.

When they had Bert Blyleven in the batting order in 1972, the Twins were a bunting team, but when sacrificing fell off with the coming of the designated hitter, some people jumped on Frank Quilici. It wasn't the manager's fault that they had taken away his best bunter.

When a Giant runner occupies third base, don't anticipate a bunt. Their resolution to omit the squeeze play from their repertoire was strengthened when Wes Westrum strayed from the policy once last summer. Skillful Tony Fuentes, laid one down and Bobby Bonds took off from third base only to encounter Philadelphia catcher Larry Cox with the ball in his hands. He didn't let go and Bob limped away.

The next night, Bonds cracked into Philadelphia's Larry Garber and this time shook the ball out of his grasp. This wasn't a squeeze but with their ace looking as though he had tangled with a bobcat, henceforth the Giants brought their men home from third by other strategy.

The Cardinals' one flirt with suicide resulted in just that, and more—a double play.

Earl Weaver, at Baltimore will bunt but the Birds' Don Baylor may be dubious, he was charged with caught stealing twice against the White Sox in a wild inning on June 16, at Baltimore. Pinch running, Baylor tried to swipe second and was nailed by Ed Herrmann and charged with caught stealing, despite the second baseman dropping the ball. Then Baylor swiped third and was off again when Andy Etchebarren failed to connect on a squeeze. It was raw suicide for Baylor, who was caught flatfooted at the plate.

Players are not swinging from the hip so much, they can conquer the trend of batting weakness by being clever. They hardly ever squeeze in the World Series for you can take more risks in 162 games than in seven.

Prince Hal Schumacher, N.Y. Giants' World Series ace in the 1930's, remembered catcher Gus Mancuso plopping one in the 1933 series, that scored Lefty O'Doul. "They are so scarce you remember them forty years later. They don't spring out of the box now, to the third base side" the 1930 star points out. "You couldn't bunt on the Giants with men on second and first. The third baseman guarded the bag and manager Bill Terry made us pitchers field the ball and we always got our man at third."

To put Campanaris' 1974 World Series squeeze in context, in the first five series there were 61 sacrifices in 23 games, more than three per contest. In the last five series there were 34 in 30 games, less than one per contest. They made 19 sacrifices in the 1906 games; in 1969, just two, one of which broke up a memorable affair at Shea Stadium. It wasn't a suicide squeeze but it scored the winning run from second base. Fourth game, score tied, none out, Rod Gaspar on second, Al Weis on first, J. W. Martin bunted in front of the plate, pitcher Pete Richert's throw to first base glanced off the runner's left wrist, caroming away, Gaspar scoring and the Orioles screaming in vain that Martin ran out of line.

Bunting was never deader than in 1958 when the whole NL season totaled 510. In 1917 the AL made 1731 sacrifice hits (Sacrifice flies are not part of this survey). The Chicago Cubs made 231 in 1906. Only five years ago the Red Sox made 11.

Eddie Collins, with the Athletics and White Sox from 1906 to 1930, made 511 successful bunts. He's the champ. Another old-timer, Cleveland's Bill Bradley, bunted safely 46 times in 1907.

Most shortstops are good bunters, fellows like Belanger, Larry Bowa, Campanaris, Frank Duffy, Bud Harrelson, Dent, Enzo Hernandez, Foli, Don Kessinger, Metzger, Craig Robinson, Bill Russell and Fred Patek.

Casey Stengel, while winning 10 pennants, adjusted his percentage calculation because the play wasn't as safe as it used to be. But now the lads are good at it.

Long Beach (Calif.) Independent Press-Telegram scribe Don Merry, covered the big speed test that elevated Nolan Ryan to top rating.

BASEBALL'S FASTEST PITCHERS

Baseball, many of today's sociologists will explain with unflattering prose, is a game guilty of standing still—a relic from another era unable to cope with the changing times.

But as long as there are barbershops, neighborhood taverns and street corners baseball is destined to survive and persist and endure.

The reasoning is as simple as the game itself. It is a sport relatively unchanged over three-quarters of a century—the infield fly rule, designated hitter and the Oakland A's notwithstanding. Basically, it's still three strikes and you're out and over the fence is a home run.

Baseball lives, rather affluently, on legends. It invites comparisons between today's high paid superstars and yesterday's folk heroes. They say it is a game of inches but it really is a game of numbers. You can't talk about it without mentioning a batting average or a won-loss record. Facts, figures and statistics are its staples. The game may have been weaned on names but it has been nurtured on numbers.

Ironically, during the same season that Henry Aaron became an instant hitting immortal by delivering his 715th homer, science and industry invaded the game in an attempt to answer the age-old question, "Who is the fastest pitcher of them all?" What a team of technicians did on the night of Sept. 7 at Anaheim Stadium may set a precedent. It won't settle many arguments about the past but it promises intriguing—not to mention precisely calculated—possibilities for the future.

On the night in question, four scientists from the Electronics Research Division of Rockwell International used one of their firm's instruments—a coherent infrared radar device—to measure the speed of a major league pitcher under actual game conditions.

The idea was the brainstorm of George Lederer, promotion director for the California Angels, and the subject was Angel pitcher Nolan Ryan, a rather obvious choice considering that Ryan established the major league strikeout record with 383 during the 1973 season.

Dick Brandewie of Rockwell was in charge of the four-man team of scientists which also included Walt Davis, Larry Telk and Jimmy Yamamete. With the infrared radar unit located on the second level of the press box, the crew conducted a test-run on Aug. 20 when Ryan was matched against another hard thrower—Detroit's Mickey Lolich—and then conducted the official experiment Sept. 9 when Ryan opposed the Chicago White Sox.

Technically, this is how it worked: The radar unit transmitted an infrared beam to a point 15 feet in front of home plate. When a pitched ball passed through the beam, 17 inches wide and 2 inches high, its speed, was recorded by measuring the doppler frequency shift of infrared waves scattered by the pitched ball in comparison to the regular transmitted frequency.

If this sounds as difficult as actually attempting to hit a Ryan fastball, it really wasn't. With the speed measurement range set between 79 and 105 mph, Ryan hit a high of 100.8 mph. But he waited until the ninth inning to do it, finally surpassing the 100 mph barrier with a fastball to Lee Richard.

The pitch to Richard was the only time all evening that Ryan was able to exceed 100 mph but it was sufficient to erase Bob Feller's recognized speed mark of 98.6 which had stood since 1946 when Rapid Robert was timed with a U.S. Army chronograph for five pitches prior to a game in Washington.

Actually, Ryan was clocked fractionally higher at 100.9 during the dry run and in the course of the two monitored games unleashed seven pitches which topped Feller's standard. Lolich managed a 90.9 fastball on Aug. 20, the same night he notched his 2500th career strikeout.

Although the Angels took precautions to minimize carnival conditions attendant to such a promotion, they did reap reams of publicity from the event. The major sidelight was a contest in which entrants were asked to estimate Ryan's highest clocking and more than 7000 entries from 38 states were received. The estimates ranged from a skeptical 48 mph to an overzealous 200 mph.

It was not vintage Ryan on Sept. 7. Aware that he was throwing against the clock as well as the White Sox, he struggled most of the distance, striking out nine—a modest figure for him—and walking seven. "I'm sure I've thrown faster than that," he said, almost apologetically. "I was worried at the start (one of his warmup throws was timed at 55 mph) and I'll bet you were, too," he smiled at Lederer.

But Lederer and the Angels took the 100.8 speed and ran with it—all the way to the Guinness Book of records where it will appear in the 1975 edition, due in September.

There are those who will frown and say, "So what." They will argue that Ryan had the benefit of modern technology and sophisticated equipment on his side and that, in reality, no one was really faster than say, Walter Johnson.

The speed of renowned hard-throwers has long intrigued baseball men and attempts have been made, from time to time, to record the velocity of pitches.

The first documented attempt took place at the Remington Arms Works in Bridgeport, Conn. in 1914. Johnson, who led the American League in strikeouts 12 times, including eight successive seasons between 1912 and 1919, was timed with a ballistic measuring device. The machine's authenticity would only be classified as dubious by today's standards but 61 years ago it was considered a precision instrument and Johnson was caught throwing at 127 feet-per-second or 86.6 mph.

Later, at the same location, Christy Mathewson, who was alleged to have more on his pitches than the autograph of the National League president, was timed in 134-feet-per-second or 91.3 mph.

In 1933, New York baseball scribe Dan Daniel masterminded what became known as "The Velocity Test for Major League Pitchers." Daniel rounded up Lefty Gomez of the Yankees and Van Lingle Mungo of the Brooklyn Dodgers and transported them to West Point where a team from the U.S. Military Academy hauled out its chronograph and went to work. The results were less than awe-inspiring. The best Mungo could achieve was 77.4 mph while Gomez was worse off at 75.7. These figures prompted the deduction that "the results were obviously in error, possibly due to flaws in the chronograph."

By 1939, the chronograph's flaws had apparently been reduced and recorded speeds increased. Dee Miles, an outfielder of journeyman stature with the Philadelphia A's was timed in 92.7. Several weeks later Atley Donald, a righthander with the Yankees, fired a pitch that stopped the clock in 94.7. Donald reigned as the king of recorded speed until Feller unseated him on Aug. 20, 1946.

Feller was allowed to warm up for 10 minutes prior to the test. Then he threw five pitches through the chronograph, a box-like wooden contraption equipped with electric beams set five feet apart. His 98.6 effort came on his second delivery. That was the same year Feller reached his zenith for strikeouts—348. To attain that figure, Feller fanned an average of 8.44 batters per nine innings.

One school of thought is that strikeouts per nine innings is a more accurate barometer than anything yet developed by technology and if that is the case Ryan is ahead in this field, too, with a 10.57 average set during the 1973 season. Sandy Koufax, who struck out 328 in 1965, averaged 10.26 K's per game.

Renowned as a haven for the unlikely and the unusual, Brooklyn's Ebbets Field became a party to baseball's obsession for speed during the 1953 season when two Dodger pitchers—Johnny Podres and Joe Black—were invited to take part in a contest.

NOLAN RYAN displays a rare memento of his fast ball speed throwing event, with four baseballs included.

They were timed with a DuMont cathode ray oscillograph, an unwieldy-looking wooden box which was installed at home plate. It had a triangular-shaped hole through which the hurlers fired their hummers. Black's best effort was 93.2 mph and he was declared the winner. Podres measured 92.1.

Koufax has his slew of supporters whenever the subject of speed comes up but, unhappily, he was clocked only once and under anything but ideal circumstances. Koufax and his teammate, Don Drysdale, the one-two punch of the Los Angeles Dodgers in the early and mid-sixties, were two of six pitchers timed in a test conducted by This Week magazine in Miami during the spring of 1960. The others were Steve Barber of Baltimore, Herb Score of Cleveland and Ryne Duren and Bob Turley of the Yanks—all noted for their overpowering arms.

But spring is not the best time to test a pitcher for anything, except, possibly, poundage put on during the off-season.

What was remarkable about the Miami escapade is that all six pitchers, despite the rust of winter still serving as an encumbrance, managed somehow to exceed 90 mph. Barber graded out the highest at 95.5 followed by Drysdale (95.3), Koufax (93.2), Duren (91.1), Score (91.0) and Turley (90.7).

"You would have thought they would have waited a couple of months until we were in peak condition," Drysdale said of the Miami test which was conducted with a high-speed camera. "We were told there was going to be a test of some sort but it was no big deal. We didn't even set up for it and it was actually done without us knowing when. The first I knew it was over what when I read a filler in a Sunday paper."

So much for big names. Those who saw his pitch, if that is the correct terminology, will swear on a stack of old Sporting News copies that Steve Dalkowski was the fastest ever. If not the fastest, this minor league legend certainly qualifies as the most erratic.

In nine exasperating summers in the bushes, Dalkowski struck out the inspiring total of 1396. He also walked 1354. One night in Panama City, Fla. he threw two pitches through the backstop screen. On another occasion in Montgomery, Ala., he wound up and let loose with a delivery that sailed over the grandstand. It is said that rival managers would not let their hitters squat in the on-deck circle when Dalkowski was throwing for fear of their lives.

Ted Williams stepped into the batting cage one spring against Dalkowski, a Baltimore chattel, and felt a stiff breeze under his chin. "I didn't even see a damn thing," Williams said and departed hurriedly.

Dalkowski appears in sixth place on the list of fastballers who have been timed electronically. He was charted at the Aberdeen (Md.) Proving Grounds in 1958. That was the same season he hurled a game in which he fanned 17 and walked 16, using 283 pitches. Anyway, the test for Dalkowski came the day after he had worked a night game and reporters who were gathered for the event insist that it took the scatter-armed southpaw 40 minutes before he could aim his pitches close enough to the timing device to be recorded. Supposedly exhausted, Dalkowski was clocked in 93.5 mph.

RIP SEWELL, master of "Blooper" ball, displays his slow delivery before a game vs. the Dodgers at Ebbets Field in 1944. He pitched for Pirates.

Finally, at the other end of the spectrum, we encounter Rip Sewell, originator of the "Blooper" pitch. Employed by the Pittsburgh Pirates, Sewell began experimenting with his new delivery—also referred to as the "ephus" or "nothing" pitch—in 1940 and at last put it on public display in 1943. Sewell's disconcerting discovery arched as high as 25 feet above field level before dipping down across the plate.

Sewell used the pitch sparingly but successfully. In three-plus seasons only one blooper had been attacked for an extra base hit. Flushed with this type of confidence, Sewell decided he would taunt Ted Williams with it during the 1946 All-Star game in Boston's Fenway Park. So in the eighth inning with the National League hopelessly behind, Sewell served up his balloon to Williams. Williams turned it into a fastball, launching it into the right field bullpen. Sewell went back to the drawing board with a stern reprimand from Ford Frick, the embarrassed National League president.

Sewell could have been timed, too. With either a sundial or a calendar.

President of Baseball Writers Association of America, Charley Feeney, on sports beat for the last 20 years, is baseball expert for the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

It was a cool June Sunday afternoon in San Francisco's Candlestick Park. Charlie Fox, the Giant manager at the time, was watching his pitchers being bat-mauled by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Willie Stargell had three hits, including a grand slam homer. Things like this have happened before to other teams, Fox said to himself.

Fox wasn't bothered about Stargell, an established major leaguer. He was more interested in another Pirate that afternoon of June 9, 1974.

Richie Zisk, a husky righthanded swinger, was hitting line drives in all directions. In the first inning, Zisk belted an opposite field home run over the right field fence off lefthander Ron Bryant.

In the fifth inning, Zisk lined a double to center off righthander Jim Willoughby.

In the ninth, Zisk belted a line drive into the gap in right center off righthander Charlie Williams. As the ball skidded past Bobby Bonds, the Giant right-fielder, and Garry Maddox, the center fielder, Zisk became a thinking man's baserunner.

He knew he had a chance for the cycle. He knew if he could turn this gap-shot liner into a triple he would join an elite group in baseball who hit a single, double, triple and home run in one game.

"When I got near second base," Zisk said later, "the only way anybody was going to stop me was to shoot me."

Zisk reached third base long before the relay throw from the outfield reached Giant third baseman Steve Ontiveros.

Did hitting for the cycle mean so much to Zisk who had been a big leaguer for less than two years?

"At the time," Zisk said, "I felt it meant something. Hitting for the cycle is something you can never think about in advance. It just happens."

The Pirates were leading by a dozen runs when Zisk hit his gap shot.

"If it was a close game," he said, "I probably would have stopped at second. But I want to get one thing straight. I wasn't trying to show up anybody. When I realized I had a chance for the cycle, I put a different value on the hit. How many players have hit for the cycle? 200? 500? I had no idea at the time."

Richard Walter Zisk, born in Maspeth, Queens, and brought up in Parsippany, N.J., became only the 111th big leaguer to hit for the cycle since 1900. It has been accomplished 126 times, Babe Herman is the all-time cycle leader. He did it three times—twice in 1931 with the Brooklyn Dodgers and in 1933 when he was with the Chicago Cubs. Thirteen players did it twice.

FOR THE CYCLE

RICHIE ZISK, Pirates' bat champ, hitting for the cycle on June 9, 1974, became the first since Joe Torre in 1973.

Zisk was the only big leaguer who “cycled” in 1974 and he is one of 15 active big leaguers who have done it.

Perhaps, the smallest man to hit for the cycle is Freddie Patek, the 5-6 shortstop for the Kansas City Royals who did it in 1971.

“It remains something special for me,” said Patek, “because it puts me among some of the game’s great hitters. Sure it was only a one-game thing, but I’ll always remember it.”

Zisk feels he may forget his cycle.

“When I look back over some of my accomplishments in 1974, I tend to forget the cycle,” the Pirates’ right fielder said. “Now that I’ve done it, it’s nice to realize that I’m among a very select few to accomplish it in 75 years.”

Zisk’s teammate, Willie Stargell, hit for the cycle in 1964.

“I had the wheels then to go for triples,” Stargell said. “It’s tough to hit for the cycle when you can’t run for triples.”

In 1967 and in 1971, Stargell went through the entire season without hitting a triple.

Speed, however, is not an absolute requirement to become a cycle hitter.

Randy Hundley of the Minnesota Twins, who hit for the cycle when he was with the Cubs in 1966, has never been known for his speed. Neither were fellows like Ralph Kiner (1950, Pirates) and Johnny Mize (1940, Cardinals) who are among the cycle men.

Garry Schumacher, a crackerjack baseball writer who later went straight and worked for the Giants—both in New York and San Francisco—is not surprised that no hitter has been able to match Babe Herman's three cycles.

"There wasn't anything the Babe couldn't do with the bat," Schumacher said. "He was one of the game's great hitters."

When it was mentioned to Schumacher that another Babe—Ruth—had never hit for the cycle, Schumacher became a baseball writer again.

"Ruth discovered a way how not to hit triples," Schumacher said. "He hit the ball out of the park."

With Hall of Famers Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig each hitting for the cycle twice during their careers, the Yankees lead the American League with 12 cycles.

DiMaggio, in his second big league season, hit for the cycle in 1937 and again in 1948—three years before he retired.

Looking back, DiMaggio once said that he was surprised that he hit for the cycle so late in his career.

"I thought I was old enough to settle for doubles instead of triples," DiMaggio said kiddingly.

Bucky Harris, one of DiMaggio's managers with the Yankees, knows better.

"Joe DiMaggio," Harris once said, "always took the extra base. It was a quality often overlooked. DiMaggio was one of the game's outstanding baserunners. He never made a mistake on the bases."

Gehrig hit for the cycle in 1934 and again in '37. Often lost in the shadow of Ruth, Gehrig was a destructive hitter who destroyed pitchers and helped the Yankees dominate the American League for many years.

RICHELIE ZISK, rated 6th for bat title with .313 in '74, has hit 57 doubles, 10 triples, 28 HRs in two years.

BABE HERMAN, only player to hit for cycle three times, batted out .324 lifetime batting mark and 181 homers.

The late Pie Traynor, who belongs to the Cycle Club (1923), felt he knew why members of the Pittsburgh Pirates hit for the cycle more than any others.

The Pirates played for 41 years at Forbes Field which Traynor labeled "a triple park" because of its spacious outfield.

"I think I saw more hitters hit for the cycle than any other player," Traynor once said. "It seemed that a year didn't go by that someone was coming close to the cycle at Forbes Field."

The record shows that 16 Pirates hit for the cycle—the all-time high.

Moose Solters is blind now. But he remembers the 1934 season when he was playing for the Red Sox and hit for the cycle.

"It's the kind of memories that you just can't forget," said Solters who operates a tavern in Pittsburgh.

Oldtimers still are skeptical when they learn that Gerald Walker of the 1937 Tigers hit for the cycle.

Walker was a notoriously bad baserunner.

"I wondered if Walker touched all the bases," Casey Stengel chuckled at the 1974 World Series.

There are three recently retired players who hit for the cycle. They are Tommie Agee, (1970, Mets) Jim Ray Hart (1970, Giants) and Jim Hickman (1963, Mets).

"When you hit for the cycle, people tend to forget about it a day or so later," Agee said. "If I had done it in the World Series, people would have remembered it forever."

JOE DiMAGGIO, welcomed by batboy Tim Sullivan and Lou Gehrig after hitting homer for cycle in 1937, had 131 triples, 389 doubles lifetime.

FRED PATEK, 5-6, Royals, is smallest man to hit for cycle.

It's not surprising that Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins hit for the cycle. He did it in 1970. Carew is the type of hitter who might be able to tie Babe Herman's three-cycle record.

"It takes a lot of luck and hitting the ball in the right places," Carew said at the 1974 all-star game in Pittsburgh.

There is no question that hitting for the cycle is a feat with luck involved.

A hitter like Larry Bowa of the Phillies figures to have little chance because he rarely hits a home run. He goes sometime 1500 at bats without a homer. Bowa is a "triple" threat and the triple is regarded as the toughest part of the four-way cycle.

Speed would seem to be important to hit for the cycle. But there are many slow-footed baserunners listed among the cycle hitters.

Some ball parks make it tough for the cycle. Fenway Park in Boston is a doubles park for righthanded hitters who don't hit the ball high enough to hit the screen in left field for a home run.

Among the Red Sox greats who hit for the cycle are Tris Speaker (1912); Joe Cronin (1940); Bobby Doerr (twice, 1944, '47); Ted Williams (1956), and Carl Yastrzemski (1965). Cronin also hit for the cycle in 1929 when he played for the Washington Senators.

It's not surprising that Yastrzemski joined such an elite group. He is a hitter with power, who hits to all fields.

Among the two-time cycle hitters, George Sisler of the St. Louis Browns and Bob Meusel of the Yankees are the only American League players to cycle in successive seasons. Sisler cycled in 1920-21 and Meusel in 1921-22.

Wally Westlake is the only National Leaguer to cycle in consecutive seasons—1948-49—when he was with the Pirates.

Artificial turf can both help and hinder a player going for the cycle.

There are fewer doubles hit when the single hit on artificial turf goes directly to the outfielder preventing a batter from taking the extra base. On the other side of the coin, there is a greater chance for more triples on artificial turf when the ball is hit between the outfielders.

Grass generally slows down gap shots.

Hitting for the cycle has to be a unique accomplishment even if baseball is played for the next 500 years.

Before a game, a hitter might predict that he will hit two home runs. Occasionally, his prediction will come true. Occasionally.

No hitter goes into a game expecting to hit a single, double, triple and home run. It's beyond his wildest dream.

It could be in the 1975 season there won't be another cycle hitter added to the list. It could be that Richie Zisk will be the last big leaguer to hit for the cycle until 1980.

Then again, three hitters could hit for the cycle during the first week of the 1975 season.

The cycle goes 'round and 'round and nobody knows when some big league hitter will accomplish it again.

leven shut out him and the Rangers, 9-0, May 24, last season. The all-time record is 11, held jointly by Mel Ott and Babe Ruth.

Orioles' All-Star third baseman, Brooks Robinson, who committed only 15 errors in 1973, was charged with six errors in Baltimore's first 18 games in 1974.

Dock Ellis, Pirates righthander, became only the second hurler in major league history to hit the first three batters he faced on May 1, last year. He hit Pete Rose, Joe Morgan and Dan Driessen in the Pirates' 5-3 loss to the Reds. Emerson Hawley of the Cardinals, set the so-called record, when he clobbered three consecutive batters in the first inning in 1874.

Wilbur Wood, White Sox' crack left-hander who bats right, helped usher in the designated hitter rule in 1972 by fanning 65 times at the plate—a major league record.

The top two hitting pitchers in the National league are Pirates—and both are southpaws. Ken Brett, who bats left, hit .310 (27 for 87) with two homers (nine lifetime) and 15 RBI. Jim Rooker, a righthand batter, hit .305 (29 for 95) with no homer and eight RBI.

Hank Aaron, all-time home run leader, finished the season with 733 home runs, picking up 20 in his 21st season. He extended his own record of 20-or-more homers in a season to 20 straight years.

The Los Angeles Dodgers is the first team in sports history to play before five million fans in one season. The 1974 NL champs drew 5,054,924 fans to all of their games beginning with spring training. The Dodgers home attendance in '74 was 2,632,474—third best in baseball history. Including league championship play and the World Series, Los Angeles fans totalled 2,854,714. On the road, the Dodgers drew 2,094,387 coupled with 105,823 in spring games for the five million total.

Only four major league baseball managers have won more pennants than Walt Alston of the Dodgers who won seven. Casey Stengel leads with 10, Joe McCarthy and John McGraw nine each and Connie Mack, eight. Only three managers have won more World Series than Alston who won four. Stengel and McCarthy won seven apiece and Mack, five.

Mike Schmidt, Phillies infielder ended the '74 season with the longest consecutive playing streak of any active National Leaguer. He has played 190 straight games (162 in '74 and last 28 in '73).

In striking out 201 men in 1974, "Tom Terrific" Seaver of the Mets, became the first NL pitcher in history to strike-out 200 or more men in seven straight seasons. The 1973 Cy Young Award winner had been tied with the retired Sandy Koufax at six. Seaver is only the third pitcher in history to strike-out 200-or-more in seven consecutive years, joining the great Walter Johnson and Rube Waddell, both of whom pitched in the American League.

Rookie American League umpire

Jim McKean, only 29, was a pro football player at 19. A quarterback and kicker, he signed with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League and three years later went to Saskatchewan Roughriders and a Grey Cup final. Never a starter at quarterback, McKean is the first Canadian umpire in AL history. He comes from and still lives in Montreal.

Armando Rodriguez, another AL rookie umpire, is the first Latin-American umpire in the majors. He was born in Havana and now lives in Veracruz, Mexico.

Ralph Garr, the Atlanta Braves' speedster, was the 13th NL outfielder in the last 14 years to win the league batting crown. His .353 easily outdistanced the field. The only non-outfielder to win was St. Louis' Joe Torre (now with Mets), who hit .363 in 1971, when he was a third baseman.

In winning 20 games for the Dodgers last year, Andy Messersmith became the 14th pitcher in history to win 20 games in both leagues. BUT, he was only the third to go from the American to the National to hit the charmed circle—and the first in 50 years. The last AL to NL 20-game winner was Carl Mays of Cincinnati with 20-9 in 1924, after recording a 26-11 mark for the New York Yankees in 1920.

Gaylord Perry, Cleveland's gifted hurler, missed by one, his bid to win 16 straight games last season, and tie a record held jointly by Walter Johnson, Lefty Grove, Schoolboy Rowe and Smokey Joe Wood. Perry suffered a painfully sprained ankle on April 28 in a winning effort over the Angels, but the injury was known only by trainer Jim Warfield and Dr. Earl Brightman, who kept the injury in check. Perry would not let the injury be known fearing the other teams would start bunting on him. Guts!

cinnati in 1935. Hurling for the Phillies, he lost a 2-1 decision to the Reds' Paul Derringer. Bowman, a talent scout for the Orioles, covers Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Nebraska, southern Illinois and northern Arkansas.

Paul Linblad, Athletics' lefthander had appeared in a major league record 385 consecutive games, handling 126 chances, without an error before making a wild throw in the first inning against the Orioles on May 6, last year. All-time relief ace, Hoyt Wilhelm, who appeared in 247 consecutive games, handled 88 chances without an error. Lindy McDaniel, now with the Royals, had a string of 225 errorless games, while handling 108 chances.

Phil Niekro, Braves' 20-game winner, handled 64 chances without an error last season to earn NL pitchers' fielding honors. Al Fitzmorris of the Royals led AL pitchers with 59 chances, no errors.

A record four first-inning homers—three in consecutive at bats, by Al Kaline, Bill Freehan and Mickey Stanley, gave Detroit a 6-0 lead and on to an 8-2 victory over Cleveland on July 29, last season. Kaline opened the slugfest off Indians' starter Fritz Peterson with Marv Lane aboard. Then Freehan and Stanley connected. With reliever Steve Kline on the mound and Aurilio Rodriguez on first, Ed Brinkman belted the record-setting fourth homer. No other team ever hit four homers in the first inning.

When Texas Ranger crowds started increasing early last season, center-fielder Cesar Tovar took to carrying a whistle to call for fly balls. "I blow the whistle because I do not wish to collide with Mr. America," said Tovar. Mr. America is right fielder Jeff Burroughs. Tovar was afraid Burroughs might not hear a normal call over the loud crowd noises.

Oakland's Series swag amounted to $736,359.41. Manager Alvin Dark, coaches Jerry Adair and Wes Stock and 25 players, each received $22,210.09. Shares for the others ranged from $11,109.43 down to $100.

The Dodgers' share amounted to $552,269.55. Manager Walt Alston and coaches Dwight Adams, Monte Basgall, Jim Gilliam and Tom Lasoda, and 24 players, received $15,703.97. Shares for the remaining players ranged from $7,851.98, down to $100. World Series umpires each received $5,000.

Two fine umpires, Larry Napp and Jim Odom, retired at end of last season. They were replaced by Terry Cooney of Fresno, Calif. and Richard Garcia of Seminole, Florida.

Twins shortstop Danny Thompson, told two years ago that he has a form of leukemia, received the 1974 "Hutch Award" as the player who best exemplifies, fighting spirit, desire and character of the late manager of the Reds, Fred Hutchinson, who died of cancer in 1964.

The following players will become 10-year men during the 1975 season: Dave Johnson, Lew Krausse and Phil Niekro, Braves; Jose Cardinal, Don GENE TENACE of A's hit by pitch for 12th time last season, gets sympathy from coach. RON HUNT, below, is all-time HP leader with 12-year total of 243 and MINNIE MINOSO, right, former career high champ, had 189.

Kessinger and Darold Knowles, Cubs; Clay Carroll, Reds; Tommy Helms, Astros; Don Sutton, Dodgers; Cleon Jones, Mets; Steve Carlton, Jim Lonborg and Eddie Watt, Phillies; Steve Blass and Ed Kirkpatrick, Pirates; Chris Cannizzaro, Padres.

Felix Millan of the New York Mets not only retained his "toughest-to-strike-out" title in 1974, but actually improved on his '73 league-leading figure. In '74, the veteran second baseman struck out only 14 times in 585 times he faced the pitcher, for an average of one strikeout every 41.79 times to the plate. In 1973, his ratio was once every 31.77 times.

Mike Schmidt, star third baseman of the Phillies, will forever remember the 1974 season. The 24-year old infielder, who batted just .197 with 19 HRs and 55 RBIs in his rookie season (1973), hit .282 with a Major League-leading 36 homers with 116 RBIs (second in the N.L.). He also was the toughest-to-double up in '74, grounding into just four DPs for a league-leading average of only once every 142 at-bats. Mike, the starting third baseman for the NL in the All-Star Game, garnered 1,476,447 write-in votes and was sixth in the MVP balloting with 131 points.

Syracuse Herald-Journal's baseball writer Bob Snyder who has keen knowledge of minor league doings, will cover AAA International League for tenth year.

MINOR LEAGUES

Key to the Majors

MINORS' ATTENDANCE WENT OVER 11 MILLION MARK FOR FOURTH STRAIGHT YEAR

There are those who, for a decade and more, have forecast the death of baseball's minor leagues.

Some continue to paint a gloomy picture, sighting the erosion in number of minor leagues to 18 (a far cry from the "good ol' days"); the fact that fans are more major league-oriented, particularly because of television exposure in minor league cities and surrounding areas; and now, the dollar squeeze that has every facet of our society seeking ways to economize.

Will America's economic headache spell the end for the minors? If so, what will take its place as the proving ground for big league stars of tomorrow?

One minor league executive, who operates in the black, nonetheless predicted, "In five to seven years from now, organizations will have a Triple A club and just one other team in the minors. The Triple A club for veterans hanging on and prospects just a little bit away from the bigs; plus a club for kids just out of high school and college. . . . Drafting will go way down, deal with lesser numbers and higher quality. It used to be based strictly on volume."

It's true that a number of organizations have dropped one, even two farm clubs from their systems in the past few years. However, new blood seems to surface. Last season, there were 145 clubs in the 18 minor leagues in the U.S. and Mexico which comprise the National Association. And as Hank Peters, president of the National Association (the minors), pointed out at baseball's 73rd annual convention in New Orleans, that's the same number of clubs which were in operation 10 years ago. That number has dipped slightly in 1975.

Figures released at the convention showed total minor league attendance in 1974 was 11,031,- 918. This marked the fourth straight year that the 11 million mark was surpassed and third consecutive season in which eight leagues registered attendance gains.

Those leagues showing gate increases over '73 were International and Mexican (Triple A), Southern (Double A), Florida State, Mexican Center, Midwest and Northwest (A), plus Appalachian (Rookie). The 16-team Mexican loop led the way with more than 3,300,000 fans for regular season, playoff and all-star games. The three U.S. leagues in Triple A ball—Pacific Coast, International, American Association—all exceeded the million mark. Among U.S. clubs, Sacramento (PCL) was tops with 295,831—or 4,551 per opening.

That was with a last place team. But Solons' General Manager John Carbray enjoyed a bonanza at the gate in the club's 48-year-old football stadium, with its 233-foot leftfield wall. Home runs were a dime-a-dozen (there were 14 HRs there in one game). Baseball rules call for a minimum fence distance of 250 feet. The restriction was waived for Sacramento last season, but will be complied with in '75.

Even with Sacramento's gate success, the PCL was one of nine leagues dropping off in attendance. In addition to the PCL and American Association, other leagues falling off were Eastern and Texas (Double A), California, Carolina, New York-Penn and Western Carolinas (A), plus Pioneer (Rookie). The Gulf Coast (Rookie) League kept no attendance figures.

In '73, Carbray was named to head a committee to discuss restructuring Triple A ball. He offered a plan dividing the three eight-team leagues into four six-team loops. It didn't sell. And Carbray no longer sees interest in such a move.

Instead, leagues at the AAA level and below are more concerned with internal matters—and the added problems of an economy which has driven up ball-club's costs, while leaving fans short of leisure dollars or even out of work because of growing unemployment.

Major league expansion appears inevitable, although there are those in the bigs opposed. A club moving into Seattle would affect Tacoma's PCL future. One in Hawaii would force the PCL to go franchise-hunting. If Denver goes major league, that would alter the Association's make-up. And if Toronto's bid is successful, it could bite into IL attendance somewhat.

The only off-season changes at the AAA level saw Denver and Iowa (Amer. Assn.) switch affiliations, Houston moving into Des Moines, the Chicago White Sox to Denver. And the major change in Double A came in the Texas League, where Amarillo moved to Lafayette, La., and Victoria to Jackson, Miss.

IL President George H. Sisler Jr. expressed glowing optimism about the future of minor league baseball. Regarding structure, Sisler said, "Clubs can't trim down their farm systems too much, because by law, they must maintain three farm teams (the majority presently operate four-team systems).

"Actually, I would look for enlargement. I foresee expansion of the minors—providing the major leagues expand. Let's say, the majors take in four new cities in the next few years. Well, that will have to carry over into the minors. Certainly, these teams will want to operate Triple A and Double A clubs.

"At the Triple A level, that would mean," continued Sisler, "four additional teams in one league or two in one, two in another. And the same goes for the three Double A leagues."

You wouldn't add one club to a league which has an even number, because that would present unnecessary scheduling problems. And it looks at the AAA level that the Pacific Coast may be stymied in any attempt it would make to expand.

"I think having more clubs in the minors is beneficial. It means you have more kids playing baseball," said Sisler.

You'll find arguments there, particularly among purists who feel expansion is a form of social disease. Actually, it lies somewhere in between, although expansion over the last dozen years in numerous sports has left the fan wondering who is playing these games and where. Trying to identify is difficult when you can't think of all your possible choices.

Putting it strictly in baseball context, and in the words of Baltimore Orioles' Director of Player Development Jack Pastore, "I feel expansion in 1976 or '77 would be a big mistake. Football is on the down-swing. They've made the same mistakes baseball made, without benefiting from our earlier mistakes. . . . The Commissioner should hold the hard line. Move weaker franchises, OK. Put clubs in Seattle, New Orleans, perhaps Buffalo—maybe. But I'm fearful politics may play too much of a role."

And what of the financial status of the minors? "Yes, the minors are being subsidized more and more by the majors, at the Triple and Double A level," said Pastore.

"The minors will never be self-sustaining. There is some cutting within farm systems. Teams may drop one A club. But I can't foresee systems with just a Triple A and A club.

"Double A is the telling point (in evaluation of talent). Players level off quicker in Double A," added Pastore. "The fatality level rises there. . . . I just can't see anything better for at least the next five years. I don't see the college being ready to provide this talent in the next 10 years."

Talent-wise, Pastore felt, "During the first two or three months of last season, players in Triple A were the best I've seen in around 10 years."

Will the new Central Scouting Bureau (17 of 24 clubs are in for a three-year commitment, many using it as a supplement to their own scouting) diminish the amount of good players coming into the game? "We should get better coverage, because we're using it in addition to our own system," Pastore said.

"But strictly selective scouting won't work. You can't just sign 15 players a year. I'm a believer in (Branch) Rickey's theory. I'm a believer in numbers.

"It's not the old Domino Theory. It's just common sense."

"I just hope they don't overlook people. There'll be a lot less scouts out seeing players," was the mild apprehension voiced by Detroit Tigers' Assistant Director of Player Development Dave Miller.

Many baseball people prefer a wait-and-see attitude. But as one club official pointed out, "It will mean a savings of $60-80,000 to our organization."

And it is, of course, for financial reasons that the new scouting system was born. Ditto co-op clubs, where two organizations share financial and player responsibilities for one minor league team.

But the minor leagues are far from merely trying to hang on and survive. Some years seem to reap more talent than others. However, excessive expansion cannot help but yield a diluted product. And when the dilution is readily apparent, money-squeezed fans will find something else to do—even if it is the only game in town.

Still, there is progress in some areas. In Syracuse, the New York Yankees' Triple A (International) team, a community-owned club under General Manager 'Tex' Simone, will be playing in a park which is receiving a face-lift. And eventually, plans call for a synthetic playing surface for multi-purpose usage. Money is being earmarked in Rochester (IL) for a computerized scoreboard. These are two solid minor league operations, but there are other examples.

"The climate is good in Triple

A," said IL prexy Sisler. "Our league attendance was up 35,000 during the regular season. . . . No, you won't see the majors totally subsidizing in Triple A. We generate, through local operation, income that the majors cannot do in operating a minor league club."

Then, Sisler added, "History has proven that baseball flourishes during a down economy. People settle for what doesn't cost as much. And baseball is a comparatively inexpensive form of entertainment."

We'll see what the fan settles for—what he can afford to settle for.

In the meantime, let's discuss baseball's top minor league talent:

DEPT. 122, ROUTE 2, BOX 23, STEVENS POINT, WIS. 54481

League club ran away and hid in its division, winning by 14 games, then captured the IL playoffs. The left side of the Red Wings' infield—fine-fielding shortstop Tim Nordbrook (.287) and third sacker Doug DeCinces (.282), both IL All-Stars—are the best bets to stick with the Birds. And experienced righthander Dyar Miller (12-8, 2.70) rates a long look. Certainly, righty reliever Dave Johnson, who split the season between the IL (7-4, 2.36) and the big club, is up for good. Righty Paul Mitchell (14-6, 2.99) will make it, although he may have to spend another year in AAA before a spot is available. Another future big leaguer is southpaw Mike Willis, who faltered late in the season, but was 9-4, 2.64 in the IL, after moving up from Double A.

BOSTON RED SOX—A "can't miss" label has been placed on one Bosox' farmboy. And there's another who'll probably join his former Pawtucket outfield teammate in Fenway Park this spring. Boston's No. 1 prospect is 22-year-old Jim Rice, everyone's Minor League Player-of-the-Year and winner of the IL's Triple Crown (.337, 25 home runs, 93 runs batted in). The 6-2, 200-pounder was called up late in the IL season. And despite some fielding deficiencies, the Red Sox feel any shortcomings in leftfield will be overcome by Rice's superb hitting skills, which had also produced a batting title the year before in the Double A Eastern League. Otherwise, Rice will be a righty-swinging designated hitter. There's no defensive problem with young prospect No. 2, centerfielder Fred Lynn (lefty all the way). Another IL All-Star, the 23-year-old Southern Cal product hit .282 and surprised the organization with his power (21 HRs). He wowed 'em in Beantown in September (10-for-17, nine RBIs, 19 total bases). On the mound, southpaw Steve Barr (16-8, 2.45 ERA, 155 strikeouts) will be given a shot to make the big jump from being a Double A All-Star at Bristol (Eastern). Barr had won only 20 games his first five seasons in pro ball. And infielder Steve Dillard, sufficiently recovered from an arm operation to hit .271 at Pawtucket, will bid for a utility role.

CALIFORNIA ANGELS—What had been an unproductive farm system won the 1974 Topps Award as the best minor league organization in baseball—based on number of pennants and individual honors won. A dozen minor leaguers gained All-Star honors in a system with an over-all winning percentage of .536. And 13 players in the system advanced to the big club in '74. One top prospect is Salt Lake City (Pacific Coast League) All-Star outfielder Bruce Bochte, a converted first baseman who's always hit .300 and had a league-leading .355 average when called up. The Angels acquired former big leaguer Mickey Scott, a southpaw reliever who posted an eye-catching 0.99 ERA at Rochester. He was 8-2 in 57 games, led the IL in saves (17). Double A All-Stars at El Paso (Texas) include second baseman Jerry Remy, whose .338 BA led the league and who later hit .292 at Salt Lake City, shortstop Mike Miley, the former LSU quarterback, and outfielder John Balaz, who hit .324 with 22 HRs, was the league-leader in RBIs (111) and hits (177). Slim southpaw Sid Monge led the Texas League in wins (14, losing five), but had a 4.58 ERA.

CHICAGO WHITE SOX—Reserve spots and a possible berth in the starting rotation will be filled by prospects from the minors. Some good ones are ready to move up. If Stan Bahnsen doesn't show some of that 20-game form of '72, righties Jack Kucek and Jim Otten will be in the scrap for a starter's spot. Kucek, 21, jumped from the Miami (Ohio) campus to the bigs in one season, stopping off at Appleton in the Class A Midwest League, going 5-2, 1.76. Possessor of a good fastball, he beat Kansas City, 2-1, in his first big league decision, but wound up 1-4. Otten, 23, has a fine hummer and excellent knuckle curve. His first pro year ('73) saw Otten start in Double A, move to AAA. And last season, the former Arizona Stater was 6-3 at Knoxville (AA Southern), then 7-2, 2.25 at Iowa (AAA American Association). He was 4-0, 0.75 in the Florida Instructional League. It'll be tough for power-hitting Lamar Johnson, 24, to move singles-hitting, slick-fielding Tony Muser off first base. But Johnson was the Association's All-Star first baseman, hitting .301 with 20 HRs, 96 ribbies. Veteran Bill Stein (.328, 16 HRs at Iowa) figures to back up Bill Melton at third. And lefty-swinging speed-ster Nyls Nyman, Southern League Player-of-the-Year, has a shot after hitting .325, stealing 24 bases at Knoxville. He was a 9-for-14 late-season success with the White Sox. Catcher Pete Varney, the Harvard grad, hit .274, had 16 homers in 96 games at Iowa.

CLEVELAND INDIANS—A pair of righthanders—Jim Kern and Dennis Eckersly—rate as top mound prospects. Kern, who's 6-5, posted a 17-7 mark (2.52 ERA) with Oklahoma City to gain Amer. Assn. All-Star honors. He fanned a league-leading 220 batters in 189 innings, cut walks to 104 from 129 in '73, when he whiffed 182 in 166 innings in the Texas League. And he did some good work with the big club late last season. Only 20, Eckersly was 14-3, 3.40 at San Antonio, winning Texas League All-Star status. Two other righthanders, Larry Andersen and Bob Grossman, won spots on the winter roster after going 10-6 and 9-11, respectfully, at San Antonio. Switch-hitting catcher Alan Ashby hit .284 at Oklahoma City. Second baseman Duane Kuiper hit .310 and was an Association All-Star at Okie City, where he led the league in stolen bases (28). And 20-year-old outfielder Rick Manning, a .256 hitter at Okie City, hopes to stick. Flychaser Tommie Smith batted .312 in AAA.

DETROIT TIGERS—As a result of the Eddie Brinkman trade with San Diego, 22-year-old Tom Veryzer will be starting at shortstop for the Tigers. Veryzer, who has a fine arm, also hit .299 at Evansville. But the club's lone Association All-Star was outfielder Dan Meyer (.302). Sure to stick is outfielder Ron LeFlore, who made it all the way from Jackson (Mich.) State Prison to lead the Florida State League in hitting (.339), made a brief stop in Evansville, then on to the majors. Righty Vern Ruhle is the leading mound contender, following a 20-game season—he was 5-0 at Montgomery, 13-5 at Evansville, 2-0 with the Tigers. First baseman Reggie Sanders (.292, a club record 88 RBIs in AAA) doesn't figure to out-muscle newcomer Nate Colbert. Outfielder Leon Roberts (.285, 12, 79) had a good year at Evansville, where catcher John Wockenfuss (.276) was a pleasant surprise. Marty James (.295) is a centerfield prospect, but will need Triple A experience. After his play at Montgomery, James led the Florida Instructional hitters with a .342 BA. Righty Fred Holdsworth (9-6 in AAA) might stick.

KANSAS CITY ROYALS—Defensive standout Tom Poquette (.305 at Omaha) will make a strong bid for an outfield spot with the parent club. He missed much of '74 because of a knee injury. Righthander Dennis Leonard is the club's top pitching prospect, after posting a 12-13 mark (3.48) at Omaha, where he whiffed 193 Triple A batters in 222-2/3 innings. Leonard, 23, tossed no-hitters in '72-'73. Lefty Bob McClure (5-8, 3.85 at Omaha) is a 21-year-old with an outstanding pick-off move, who can start or relieve, and has had less than two full years of pro ball. Righty reliever Aurelio Lopez, purchased late last season from the Mexico City Reds, appeared in eight games for KC, could bolster the bullpen. He was the most effective reliever in the Triple A Mexican League over the last five years. Second baseman-shortstop Rodney Scott stole 85 bases while splitting '74 at Waterloo and San Jose, hitting .258 and .300, respectively. Outfielder-first baseman Sheldon Mallory, who stole 72 bases in 83 games at San Jose, hit .297 before being promoted to Jacksonville, may be the best base-runner in the organization. Infielder Jamie Quirk, KC's first pick in the June '72 draft, moved up from Jax to Omaha and responded with a .281 bat, popping 10 homers in 53 games. And slider-sinker pitcher George Throop, a 6-7 righthander, was 12-5 (2.66) at San Jose.

MILWAUKEE BREWERS—The club's winter roster includes a trio who combined for 113 home runs, 302 runs batted in with the help of that mini-park in Sacramento. Flychaser Sixto Lezcano hit .325 with 34 HRs, 99 ribbies in the Pacific Coast League. Fel-

JIM KERN won 17 games and struck out 220 in American Assn. in 1974.

DAN MEYER (left) was All-Star OF in 1974, and TOM VERYZER, a .299 hitter, will be Detroit Tigers' shortstop.

AN ATHLETIC

CHAMPION BODY

STRENGTH · ENDURANCE · RESILIENCE ·

ROTATION-POWER MAKES YOUR MUSCLES

IN 67 EXCITING DAYS....!

YOUR NEGLECTED MUSCLES ARE IN FOR THE SURPRISE OF YOUR LIFE.

Your blood vessels will widen and will carry more blood. Your joints will enjoy being "greased" again. All inner organs will receive fresh impulses. Your Circulatory System will carry more of the vitally important build-up elements to your muscles. Inactive parts of your lungs will be filled with air. Your chest will widen by 5-8 inches. Arms and legs will develop an athletic shape as never before. Flabby fat vanishes inch by inch, including the least desired one on your belly. A new exerciser, the DYNOTRAINER enables everybody to train sensibly, i.e. it will adapt itself automatically to your condition and to your age.

WE'LL SHOW YOU HOW TO DO IT RIGHT! DON'T GO THE WRONG WAY!

- 1) a FLAT CHEST won't simply disappear because you are jogging or walking. Only a targeted development of the PECTORALS (chest) and SERRATUS MAGNUS (side chest) muscles will achieve this. The DYNOTRAINER will do not only this, but simultaneously also add another 1/3 gallon of air-volume to your lungs, which, in turn, will improve your ENDURANCE considerably.
- 2) an uncomfortable MIDRIF won't go away with swimming or doing kneebends. Probably it will be in the way there! But the DYNOTRAINER will alternately work your stomach muscles hard, it will knead and pummel and massage them, and reach even deep into the digestive tract. No flabby fat can survive such treatment!
- 3) no DROOPING SHOULDERS or ROUND-BACKS can be corrected by doing the skip-rope or by playing hockey. Only the targeted build-up of the DELTOID (shoulders), the LATISSIMUS DORSI (back) and the TRAPEZIUS (upper back and neck) will give you the much desired V-shape. The DYNOTRAINER will do just that!
- 4) many sportsmen may unwittingly abuse their hearts (which is a muscle in itself, as you well know) and circulation. The DYNOTRAINER with its automatic adaptation to your condition will permit just that much exertion of your power as will be beneficial to your limitations given by age. It is the best way to prevent heart trouble!
- 5) POWERFUL LEGS and ARMS can not be achieved by calisthenics alone. Only the DYNOTRAINER will give those growth impulses automatically, which are so necessary for the build-up of your muscles. You can rest assured that they will grab whatever they can get!

WE'LL LET YOU SHARE THESE SECRETS - FREE!

You'll find 42 tips and know-hows in our FREE GIANT COLOR BROCHURE which is yours for the asking. It will tell you everything that is necessary to build an athletic and healthy body. We don't only say "go and exercise" and then leave you alone to do as you know (or don't). We'll show you exactly what you will have to do in your case, in order to achieve the best results, always considering YOUR condition and YOUR age. We'll be happy to send you our SUPER-BROCHURE free and without any obligation. Simply fill in the coupon below, or write us a postcard and you'll receive our wonderful COLOR-BROCHURE by return mail. low outfielder Gorman Thomas (.297) popped 51 four-baggers, drove in 122 runs. And first sacker Tom Bianco (.281, 28, 81) also had a pretty good year in the PCL. Actually, the big belter on the Sacramento club was Bill McNulty (.329, 135 ribbies), who belted a PCL-leading 55 four-baggers, 44 in the Solons' park, with its 233-foot leftfield fence which greatly aided 493 HRs being hit there. The former Met chattel was the club's lone PCL All-Star. Naturally, Sacramento led the minors with 305 homers, 251 at home. Outfielder Rob Ellis hit .296 in Triple A. Mound help could come from Roger Miller (11-5 at Sacramento), lefty Pat Osburn (2-3, 2.52 at Indianapolis), who was obtained from Cincinnati, righty Tom Hausman (12-9 in AAA) and lefty Tom Deidel (9-11 at Shreveport), whose brother, Jim, is a catcher in the Yankee organization.

MINNESOTA TWINS—Former Yankee chattel Mike Pazik, a left-hander, was a double-figure winner at Tacoma (PCL). Righty Bob Johnson was 9-7 with five saves at Orlando (AA Southern), then impressed Twins' brass with his September showing in the bigs. Orlando's productive bats were wielded by Bob Gorinski (.278) and Mike Poepping, who tied for the league lead in HRs with 23. Gorinski drove in 100 runs, Poepping 75. Little lefty Eddie Bane was 10-8 at Tacoma. He was the Twins' No. 1 draft pick in June 1973. Outfielder Tom Kelly had a big year in Triple A (.308, 18 HRs).

NEW YORK YANKEES—When Director of Player Procurement Clyde Klutts reeled in Catfish Hunter, it changed the Yanks' mound picture. It certainly made it more difficult for the Pinstriper's 1972 No. 1 draft pick, 21-year-old Scott McGregor, to crack the big club's starting rotation. McGregor, All-Star lefthander in the AAA International League (13-10, 3.44 at Syracuse), may need another year in Triple A anyway. But he did lead the IL in innings pitched (199) and complete games (12). A good-hitting, good-fielding, hard-working youngster with a great deal of mound knowledge for so little pro experience, McGregor will definitely be up there before very long. To get there this year, he may have to beat out more-seasoned lefty Larry Gura (7-7, IL-leading 2.13 ERA), who did a fine job with the Yanks late in the season. Centerfielder Terry Whitfield, the Yanks' No. 1 draft selection in '71, is also a top prospect. Center may not prove to be the outfield position for Whitfield, like McGregor an eager-to-learn Californian. But the 22-year-old Whitfield, Class A Player-of-the-Year in '73, did do a creditable job with the bat (.259, 17 homers) last season at Syracuse—despite skipping Double A. Righthander Dave Pagan had an assortment of arm and blister problems with the Yanks and Syracuse, but the hard-throwing Canadian, 24, has all the tools to make it big. And tall righty Rick Sawyer (8-7, 2.79 at Syracuse) is a possibility, although he couldn't win the last two months of the season. Among future big leaguers at least a year away are centerfielder Kerry Dineen (.283, 10 HRs) and third baseman Steve Coulsen (.302), both of whom stole 26 bases in Double A at West Haven (Eastern), then jumped a notch for a few weeks.

SCOTT MCGREGOR, young southpaw, compiled 13-10 record at Syracuse.

OAKLAND ATHLETICS—Pitching has also taken on a new look with the departure of Catfish. The No. 3 spot in the rotation (behind Vida Blue and Ken Holtzman) could go to 24-year-old Glenn Abbott, a 6-6 righty who split '74 between Tucson, where he was 6-2, and the A's (5-7, 3.00). Abbott won 18 games for Tucson in '73. Mike Barlow earned a spot on the Winter roster, the 6-6 righty reliever appearing in 55 games at Tucson (4-7, 2.63). The top prospect among those spending most of the season on the farm is infielder Phil Garner (.330, 11 HRs in 96 games at Tucson), who shared PCL All-Star honors at third base with Sacramento's McNulty. But Garner's shot is at second, depending on the annual retirement of Dick Green. Of course, there's future star Claudell Washington, just 20, who'll take over in left if Joe Rudi moves to first. The speedster was a Southern League All-Star in just a half-season (.361, 11 HRs, 55 RBIs, 33 SBs), then hit .285 for the A's.

TEXAS RANGERS—Spokane's second consecutive championship club (PCL) will provide some fresh talent. That could include pitchers Steve Dunning, the ex-Cleveland righty (9-7), Jeff Terpenko (4-0, 1.69), who began the season at Pittsfield (7-2, 1.22), allowing just 36 hits in 79 innings during the season, and lefty Rick Waits (12-6), if he sharpens his control. Infielders include Roy Howell (.281, 22, 80) and Mike Cabbage (.316, 16 HRs). Three solid-hitting outfielders are 28-year-old Tom Robson, the PCL's most valuable player (.322, 41,

SHER-CO GAMES, Box 524 RT Malaga, N.J. 08328.

Sher-Co Baseball is more than just a tabletop game. It's a simulation—accurately, realistically and visually duplicating real-life baseball.

More Than Dice & Charts

A large 18 x 18" three-color playing field allows you to actually see where the ball lands. As manager, you actually position and move the nine fielders, plot and move the ball and runners as a particular play evolves.

All 24 Stadiums

Authentic charts of all 24 major league stadiums allow you to play games in your favorite team's home park. Each stadium is different. You actually see a 430-foot blast to center become a home run in Candlestick Park but an easy out in Yankee Stadium.

Complete Team Rosters

Complete rosters for all 24 teams (more than 600 ratings) allow you to plan your lineups, make trades and substitutions. Pitchers are rated on strike-outs vs. walks, earned runs allowed, innings of effectiveness, etc. Batters and fielders on how well they hit the long ball, get on base, their speed, range, throwing arm and other abilities.

Nothing Over-looked

Hit and runs, squeeze plays, pick-offs, steals, bunting, sacrifices, injuries, rained-out games—it's all here, in this exciting simulation. Even an automatic umpire and wind factor!

Never Out of Date

The best part of owning—

Sher-Co Baseball is that your rosters are never out of date. We give you our previously secret formula which now allows you to rate your own players. There's never a need to re-order expensive player cards or additional old-time teams. With our formula at your finger tips you can rate any team you want—even your own Little League, Babe Ruth, high school, college or semi-pro team! 131), little Dave Moates (.300, 42 thefts) and Bob Jones (.300, 16, 91). Robson—as a designated hitter—joined Waits and Moates on the PCL All-Stars. Catcher Bill Fahey (.259) is another prospect, along with receiver Ron Pruitt (.267, 15 HRs in Double A). Southpaw Rick Kemp won 13 games at Pittsfield.

National League

ATLANTA BRAVES—Outfielder Wayne Nordhagen had a very solid year in Triple A, hitting .291 with 16 homers at Richmond (International). He has an excellent throwing arm. Teammate Bob Beall sported a .280 BA as a switchhitter, led the league in walks, fielded superbly and gained IL All-Stars honors. Veteran major leaguer Sonny Jackson, who can play short or the outfield, hit .324 at Richmond. Shortstop Larvell Blanks (.268) exhibited a strong throwing arm in the IL. The Braves' top prospect is 22-year-old southpaw Jamie Easterly (8-6, 2.68 in AAA), who broke from spring training with the big club. The Braves are short of lefty hurlers. So Mike Beard (9-10, 2.40 in Double A) may also stick. Another big league veteran, righty reliever Joe Niekro, re-joined brother Phil in Atlanta after being 8-1, 2.09, seven saves at Richmond. He was just too good for Triple A hitters last season.

CHICAGO CUBS—Lefty-swinging Pete LaCock, converted from an outfielder to a first baseman last season, is the top hitting hope down on the farm. At Wichita, he had a shot at the American Association's Triple Crown until he was called up in September, but still wound up among the leaders in batting (.327), HRs (23), ribbies (91). He batted only .185 with the Cubs. Second baseman Manny Trillo, acquired from Oakland, hit .253 while at Tucson. He can turn the double play. Infielder Ron Dunn (.263, 17 HRs at Wichita) hit .294 in a late-season stint in the bigs. Rob Sperling (.253 in the Amer. Assn.) can play three infield positions, but needs an improved bat. Pitching hopefuls are lefties Buddy Schultz, a reliever who was 9-6 at Midland, 3-0 at Wichita, and Willie Prall, former San Francisco chattel who had control problems in Triple A, where he was 4-2, 5.13. Also, there's righty Bruce Sutter, who recovered from an early-season knee operation to register ERAs of 1.35 at Midland (Double A Texas), 1.44 at Wichita, but worked a total of just 65 innings.

CINCINNATI REDS—Indianapolis sent righthander Tom Carroll to Cincy in mid-season. He'll be a long-time big leaguer. At the end of the Amer. Assn. campaign, Indy sent 24-year-old righties Rawly Eastwick (8-7) and Pat Darcy (12-7) up. Eastwick had a 2.00 ERA in eight relief appearances for the Reds. And Darcy, acquired a year ago from Houston for Denis Menke, looked good in six big league games, winning his lone start. Other mound possibilities off the '74 Indy club—Jack Andujar and Santo Alcala—are also righties, both 22 and from the Dominican Republic. Andujar was 8-8, with good stuff but lack of control (93 walks in 111 innings). Winter Ball helped his control. Alcala, who's grown considerably during three years in pro ball and is now 6-6, had a 12-11 record at Indy. Outfielder Joel Youngblood hit .285 in the Assn., after hitting .317 at Indy the year before. And flychaser Tom Spencer swung a .291 bat at Indy with 14 HRs, 21 steals. Cincy's third base picture is wide-open. Included in the scuffle is 21-year-old Arturo DeFreites, out most of '74 with wrist and ankle injuries. The month he played at Indy, he hit .316. And Ray Knight (.227 in AAA, then up) may make it because of his glove work at the hot corner.

HOUSTON ASTROS—It'll be hard to keep 22-year-old second baseman Rob Andrews, acquired from Baltimore in the Lee May deal, out of the starting line-up. A .306 Triple A hitter at Rochester (he hit .309 in Double A in '73), the brother of ex-big leaguer Mike Andrews led the International League in hits (165) and was an every-day cog in his club's pennant and playoff victories. First baseman Raphael Batista, 28, hit .317, played well defensively at Denver. Triple A teammate Skip Jutze was an American Association All-Star catcher. On the mound, the top prospect is 21-year-old southpaw Paul Siebert, son of University of Minnesota baseball coach Dick Siebert, a .282 lifetime hitter in the big leagues. Young Siebert worked 211 innings at Columbus, where he was 15-7, 2.56 ERA and the Double A Southern loop's Pitcher-of-the-Year.

LOS ANGELES DODGERS—A perennially strong farm system has again produced some fine prospects at the Triple A level. Last season at Albuquerque, shortstop Ivan De Jesus hit .298, stole 22 bases, cut down on his strikeouts and was a defensive standout while earning Triple A All-Star status. Only 22, he's had five years in the minors. Originally a shortstop, Jerry Royster's second year at Albuquerque yielded a .275 BA (down from .302). "The Bird" received a trial at second El's players find this game makes all others seem like child's play. Truly an adult game that is unmatched for accuracy, and is skillfully designed to blend realism with gamesmanship. Use it for competition with today's teams, with the greats of earlier years - whatever pleases you most. El lets you do your own thing...play solitaire or head-to-head games in 20 minutes. What's more El shows you how to rate players from stats - you don't have to keep buying new cards every season. You can bring back any team or star who ever played. El comes in a binder. All charts and instructions are in place. Use the binder to keep your own records...take the charts out and tack them up-handle it the way you want. With the game, you get - ready-to-play - all major league teams on 1974 records...over 600 players, rated to hit accurately for average and power, for fielding skills, running, team DP's. Pitchers graded to ERA and rated precisely for walks and K's. In addition to today's teams, you get 39 of the great teams of the past...plus all Hall of Famers, career rated...plus the "top 400 players of all time", best-season rated! Order direct for $8.98, plus $1.00 for postage. Or, send one dollar and ask for more information. When you purchase, the dollar will be credited to the sale.

This is "El's" sixth great year. A review by Steve Goldstein in May '74 THE TRADER SPEAKS said, "El Baseball is nothing short of fantastic, and fully deserves the highest rating thus awarded by this columnist. RATING - A." base during Winter Ball. Right-hander Rick Rhoden was 9-10 in his third Triple A campaign. He notched his first big league win in September. Rhoden was LA's No. 1 pick in the June '71 draft. Outfielder Henry Cruz hit .304, had 26 steals before being sidelined by a torn ligament in his right knee (he'd been sidelined all of '71 with a torn ligament in his left knee). Flychaser Charlie Manuel (.329) had a big year in AAA. Infielder Bob Randall and catcher Kevin Pasley hit .338 and .314, respectively, in the PCL. Righties Rex Hudson (16-4) and Eddie Solomon (11-4) had fine AAA seasons. Manuel, Randall and Hudson joined De Jesus on the PCL All-Stars.

MONTREAL EXPOS—Like Expos' No. 1 catcher Barry Foote, 20-year-old Gary Carter is a converted infielder. But he's a top-notch catching prospect, having been chosen to Topps' AAA All-Stars last season, when he popped 23 homers (second in the International), drove in 83 runs and hit .268. He may also be tried at third or the outfield. It's in the infield where the Expos will find the most new faces cropping up, due in part to trades. Pete Mackanin, a candidate for the second or third base jobs, came from the Texas organization as part of the Willie Davis deal, after hitting 28 HRs at Spokane in the homer-happy PCL. Mackanin batted .291, had 103 RBIs, 103 runs scored. Second base possibility Rudy Kinard (.254 at Arkansas) came over from St. Louis' farm system in the Ron Fairly trade. Larry Parrish (.284, 13, 77 at Quebec City) made the late-season jump from a Double A All-Star to the bigs. His glove could keep him up there. Outfielder Pepe Manguel (.288, 17 HRs) was an IL All-Star. First baseman-outfielder Larry Biittner hit .328 at Memphis. Third baseman Pat Scanlon hit .283 with 18 HRs in AAA. Memphis pitchers were hard to keep track of, so many kept going up. But lefties Dan Warthen (5-6, 3.07 at Quebec City and 6-2, 3.24 at Memphis) and Brian Abraham (8-3, 3.97 in the IL), plus righty Chip Lang (5-1, 1.70 in AA, then 5-7, 3.21 in AAA) did well in Winter Ball. Righty Dale Murray became a reliever and was outstanding in Triple A (4-2, 1.47) and the majors (1-1, 1.03), registering a season's total of 19 saves.

NEW YORK METS—There's slim pickin' down on the farm. Rated the best chance of moving up a notch from Tidewater is righthander Hank Webb (10-8, 3.43), who fanned 130 Triple A RICK RHODEN (left), a righty, is vying for spot on Dodgers' staff, while IVAN DE JESUS is a shortstop aspirant.

batters in 152 innings. He lost two decisions with the Mets. Webb pitched well in the Puerto Rican Winter League. Nino Espinosa, a 21-year-old Dominican, was 9-8, 3.42 at Victoria (Texas). Righty Randy Sterling posted a 12-11 record, 3.39 ERA at Tidewater. Catcher John Stearns, acquired from Philadelphia in the deal for Tug McGraw, was burning up the Carolina League (.343), when the ex-Colorado footballer was promoted to Toledo (AAA). He hit .266 pitching for a .266 average. Stearns, whose brother, Bill, is a receiver in the Yankee chain, will probably need another Triple A season under his belt. Switch-hitting first baseman Brock Pemberton hit .322 with 89 ribbies in the Texas League, is ticketed for Triple A. Outfielder Jorge Roque was drafted from Puebla of the Triple A Mexican League, where he hit .320, had 90 RBIs, 28 stolen bases. Fellow flychaser Benny Ayala (.274, 11 HRs in the IL, then up) may have a tough time sticking because of the Mets' off-season dealing for improved outfield personnel.

PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES—A pair of 21-year-old pitchers—righty Roy Thomas and lefty Tom Underwood—are rated the Phils' top prospects. A 6-5, 215-pounder drafted No. 1 by Philly in June '71, Thomas was 14-11, 2.59 at Reading (AA Eastern). He had 11 complete games, 168 strikeouts, and has 516 whiffs in his 547-inning minor league career. In '73, Thomas was 15-8,

THE LINEUP GUIDE

The tabletop baseball game fan now has a system to determine the starting lineups for his season, a complete resume showing who played at each position along with the batting order, and a list of player moves on and off the roster showing the effective dates of the moves. By using THE LINEUP GUIDE, the individual can choose the starting lineups for any team without any bias on his part. This is, of course, invaluable for solitaire play. By using THE LINEUP GUIDE, each player will start the approximate number of games he actually did during the 1974 major league season.

Each major league team has all the necessary figures for the entire season printed on both sides of an 8½ x 11 sheet.

On one side of the sheet is the complete breakdown of the entire season for the team, showing all the players that appeared in at least one game, their positions played broken down between starts and substitutions, pinch hit and pinch run appearances, and their places in the batting order. The outfielders are broken down between left, center, and right fields.

The other side of the sheet has the season broken down into twelve segments of varying time. Within each of these periods of time are listed the players at each position along with the die rolls that will show who starts on any specific day. This side also contains the eligibility list that shows the roster changes throughout the year.

THE LINEUP GUIDE showing all 24 major league teams for the 1974 season is available for $5.50 (Ohio residents $5.72) from 2.24 with 193 strikeouts at Rocky Mount. Underwood, the No. 2 draft in the June '72 selection, was 14-5, 2.51, had 11 route-going performances, 157 strikeouts in 165 innings, at Reading. He began his career in '73 by going 13-6, 2.10 with 187 whiffs in 193 frames at Spartanburg. Hopefuls from Toledo's Triple A club include righties George Culver, an ex-big leaguer who was 7-4, 2.04, and 20-year-old Larry Christenson (11-9, 3.30 in his second Triple A season). Also, the Phils are high on ex-Arizona State All-American Alan Bannister, an infielder-outfielder who was baseball's No. 1 pick in the January '73 regular phase draft. He hit AAA pitching at a .289 clip, had 36 thefts in 94 games, spent some time with the parent club. Outfielder Jerry Martin (.285, 15 steals) doesn't need much more work in the minors. And flychaser Dave Schneck hopes he finds new life with the Phils after being swapped by the Mets, having hit .240 at Tidewater, .205 in NY.

PITTSBURGH PIRATES—The Buccos have a pair of outfielders with speed to burn in Omar Moreno and Miguel Dilone. But they'll have to keep burning up the minors, as long as fellas like Stargell, Zisk, Oliver and Parker are around. Moreno, 22, led the Eastern League in stolen bases (67), hitting .300 in his sixth season. Dilone, 20, was a .332 hitter while leading the Carolina League in hits (175) and thefts (84, seven more than Moreno had there in '73). Also trying to crash the Bucs' flychasing contingent are good glove Dave Augustine, whose Triple A bat at Charleston slipped from .276 to .218, IL mates Ed Ott (.248, 14 HRs) and Bill Flowers (.277, 29 SBs). Utility man Art Howe should stick from the start, after hitting .338 in the IL, then going up. Shortstop Craig Reynolds hit .282 in Double A, well over .300 during his stint in Triple A. Big righty-swinging catcher Ken Macha led the Eastern in hitting (.345), belted 21 HRs, adding 100 RBIs, 21 steals to his Double A All-Star credentials at Thetford Mines. Southpaw Rick

Standart fanned 82 in 53 frames at Salem and Thetford Mines, where he had a combined record of 13-4, ERA of under 2.00, earning him a spot on the Winter roster. Jim Minshall, reliever at Thetford and Charleston, was 8-3 in 62 frames.

ST. LOUIS CARDINALS—One Redbird farmhand succeeded another as American Assn. batting champion. First baseman Keith Hernandez, 21, a 40th round draft pick in '71, was a .260 hitter in Double A in '73. He got a late start last season because of a spring training knee injury, requiring surgery. When healthy, all the lefty-swinging Hernandez did was pace the Triple A loop with a .351 average, poking 14 HRs, then hit .294 the last few weeks of the year with the Cards. With Joe Torre gone, Hernandez could be at first, unless Ted Simmons moves from behind the plate. Outfielder Jim Dwyer, the '73 champ, hit .336 at Tulsa last season before spending most of the year in the bigs, hitting .279. Minor league veteran outfielder Danny Godby also had a big year in Triple A (.344). Righty Ray Bare had his best pro season (12-4, league-leading 2.25 ERA at Tulsa), was an Assn. All-Star along with Hernandez and Godby. Righty John Denny was 9-8 in AAA. And righthander Bill Parsons, who won 13 games each of his first two big league seasons (1971-72) for Milwaukee, was a combined 9-16 at Sacramento and Tucson, then obtained from Oakland. Flychasers Larry Herndon (.285), Jerry Mumphrey (.290) and Joe Lindsey (.278) stole 50, 40 and 22 bases, respectively, at the Double A level.

SAN DIEGO PADRES—A pleasant surprise and some No. 1 draft choices could make the Padres' ballclub this spring. The surprise came in '74, when right-hander Joe McIntosh, a non-roster invitee to spring training, stuck with the club. He was sent to Hawaii a few weeks later, posted a 9-11 mark (5.27 ERA), was 0-4 in the bigs in September. The Padres still rate the ex-Washington State All-American as their top pitching prospect. Shortstop Bill Almon was baseball's initial draft pick in June '74, off the Brown campus. After swinging a light bat at Hawaii (.222) and Alexandria (.186), the former Bruin All-American hit .316 in 16 big league games. The team's No. 1 pick in January '70, outfielder John Scott, didn't hit in a late-season trial after a good year at Hawaii (.273, 28 SBs). Another outfielder, 5-9 Jerry Turner, 21, was an All-Star at Alexandria (Texas), where he hit .326, had 18 HRs, 18 SBs. He hopes to jump all the way from Double A, after hitting .292 in a late-season big league trial. Righthanders Mike Allen and Jay Franklin probably need Triple A experience. Allen, 20, was 8-13. 4.79 in Double A. The 22-year-old Franklin, No. 1 Padres' pick in June '71, was 8-10, 4.80 in AA ball. Coming over with Tito Fuentes from San

STREET AND SMITH'S BASEBALL

Francisco was righthander Butch Metzger (12-10, 4.72 at Phoenix). And making a bid with the Padres' staff is righty Bob Strampe (9-13, 4.19 at Evansville), who came from Detroit in the Colbert deal.

SAN FRANCISCO GIANTS—Although the Giants gave up bullpen ace Elias Sosa, they may have acquired a catching star of the future in return. The Giants are hoping young Marc Hill, a Triple A All-Star and American Assn. Rookie-of-the-Year at Tulsa, is their starting receiver this season. Hill hit .278, had 14 HRs in 96 games and showed he's already big league, defensively. Phoenix first baseman Skip James (.286) was a PCL All-Star. And teammate Glenn Adams led the league in hitting (.352). Southpaw Frank Riccelli, 22, the Giants' No. 1 pick in June '71, has two years of AAA experience, could be ready despite injuries in '74. Outfielder Gary Atwell, 23, another Arizona State product, stormed his way through three leagues in his first pro season. He hit .376 at Fresno (California), .327 at Amarillo (Texas) and .263 at Phoenix (PCL). Lefties John Morris and Gary Lavelle could make it in relief. And 20-year-old southpaw Bob Knepper became the first 20-game winner in 13 years in the California League, posting a 20-5 mark. That's a real turnabout from the way he ended up the '73 season at Fresno—losing eight in a row.

World Series Recap

FIRST GAME

The American League Champions scratched their way to a 3-2 triumph over the Dodgers in the first game of the 71st World Series. This first all-California World Series drew a record crowd of 55,974 fans.

The Dodgers outlived the A's 11-6 but left 12 runners stranded. One was picked off in the first inning. Another was left on base in the second, two in the third, two in the fourth, three in the fifth, one in the sixth, two in the eighth and one in the ninth.

Reggie Jackson put the A's in front in the second inning with a 375-footer into the opposite field stands off Andy Messersmith.

The A's made it 2-0 in the fifth on a squeeze bunt. After Ken Holtzman doubled, a wild pitch put him on third. Bert Campaneris got the sign and laid down a perfect bunt to the right of the mound that brought Holtzman across the plate.

The Dodgers scored in the fifth inning on errors. Campaneris flubbed Dave Lopes' roller and Lopes came around to score when Bill Buckner's single was bobbled by Jackson. When Holtzman walked Jim Wynn, Rollie Fingers replaced him.

The A's got their third run in the eighth. After Campaneris had singled, he moved to second on Bill North's sacrifice and scored when Ron Cey threw Sal Bando's bouncer past Steve Garvey.

STEVE GARVEY, Dodgers' 1B, was top hitter in Series with .381 average.

at first. Bando hustled all the way to third.

The next batter, Jackson, smashed one about 300 feet to right center that was grabbed by Joe Ferguson who made a perfect throw to Steve Yeager behind the plate and Bando was out.

Wynn's two-out homer in the ninth raised Dodger hopes. When Garvey singled, manager Alvin Dark brought in 25-game winner Catfish Hunter who promptly fanned Ferguson for the final out.

SECOND GAME

The Dodgers evened the series at one game apiece with a 3-2 victory. Don Sutton took charge of the A's for seven innings, allowing only a third-inning double to Campy Campaneris and a single to Reggie Jackson in the seventh.

The A's woke up in the eighth inning, but nobody scored. With one out, pinch-hitters Jim Holt and Claudell Washington singled. Then Campaneris bounced to Bill Russell who booted the ball to load the bases. Bill North grounded to Rus-

THE GREAT GAMES...
THE GREAT PLAYS...
THE TOP TEAMS...
THE ALL-TIME CHAMPIONS...

You are right there at the center of the action

* when Joe Louis almost lost his heavyweight title to the brash young Billy Conn in 1941

* when the New York Giants and the Baltimore Colts went into a "sudden death" overtime for the first time in an NFL championship game

* when Bobby Thomson brought the New York Giants from defeat to pennant-winning victory with a last-gasp home run in the 1951 National League playoff against the Brooklyn Dodgers...

Football, basketball, boxing, hockey, baseball. The great games, the great plays, the split-second decisions. THE WAY IT WAS lets you re-live the glorious excitement of both victory and defeat. Joe Louis, Otto Graham, Sugar Ray Robinson, Johnny Unitas, Bob Cousy, Glenn Davis, Mickey Mantle, Don Larsen, Leo Durocher, Red Auerbach, Vince Lombardi, Casey Stengel—the coaches and the players share their memories, the bitter and the sweet. Curt Gowdy, Red Barber, Mel Allen, Chick Hearn re-create the tension and the thrills. And 200 action photographs (many in full color) plus twelve specially commissioned full-color paintings capture the supreme moments of championship competition, exactly the way it was. $14.95 sell who touched second and threw into the dirt to Steve Garvey at first. Steve made a sensational pick-up for the double play.

Sutton got into trouble in the ninth. He plunked Sal Bando and when Jackson, checking his swing, hit a double into leftfield, manager Walt Alston yanked Sutton for Mike Marshall. Joe Rudi's single off Marshall drove in two runs. After Gene Tenace fanned, Herb Washington, the A's designated runner replaced Rudi at first. Washington kept inching off the bag as Marshall kept stepping off the mound. Suddenly Marshall made a quick-pitch to first and caught Washington easily.

The Dodgers scored in the second inning. Vida Blue walked Ron Cey who crossed the plate on singles by Russell and Steve Yeager. The winning score came in the sixth when Joe Ferguson blasted one out of the park with Garvey on first.

THIRD GAME

The AL Champs gained a 2-1 edge in the games with a 3-2 win over the Dodgers.

Dodger lefthander Al Downing, ran into trouble in the third inning. With one down, Billy North singled. While Campy Campaneris was at bat, North sprinted for second as Campy grounded to Ron Cey. When Cey threw out Campy, North continued to third. Sal Bando walked. When Reggie Jackson hit a little tapper in front of the plate, catcher Joe Ferguson tried to handle the ball but it bounced off his mitt. Jackson got to first and North scored.

Joe Rudi followed with a shot to the right of second baseman Davey Lopes, who made the stop but did not come up with the ball, as Bando crossed the plate.

In the fourth inning, Dick Green walked and Catfish Hunter's sacrifice moved Green to second. After North fled out, Campaneris' single drove Green home. Jim Brewer relieved Downing and struck out Bando for the final out.

Hunter made it look easy for 7 1/3 innings, allowing the Dodgers five hits and one earned run. But when Lopes fled to deep center and Bill Buckner poled one over the rightfield fence, Hunter was replaced by Rollie Fingers.

In the ninth, Willie Crawford led off with a homer and Joe Ferguson got on base when Campaneris bobbled his grounder. Then Fingers fanned Cey and forced Bill Russell to ground to Green who stopped the threat with a double play.

FOURTH GAME

Oakland starter Ken Holtzman, who hadn't been at bat all year because of the "designated hitter" gave the A's a 1-0 lead with a 375-foot clout over the leftfield fence off Andy Messersmith in the third inning.

Half an inning later, the Dodgers belted Holtzman for two runs. With one down, Steve Garvey singled and Joe Ferguson walked. Ron Cey struck out but Bill Russell's triple drove home Garvey and Ferguson.

The A's iced the game in the sixth with four runs. Messersmith walked Bill North and after three throws to first he bounced one past Garvey at first and North advanced to second. Sal Bando followed with a single that plated North.

Then Reggie Jackson drew a walk and Joe Rudi bunted Bando and Jackson to second and third. Claudell Washington was intentionally walked, loading the bags. Pinch-hitter Jim Holt's single scored Bando and Jackson. Herb Washington ran for Holt.

Dick Green then forced H. Washington at second but Dave Lopes' relay to first missed the double play and C. Washington scored.

FIFTH GAME

Oakland snared another series championship with a 3-2 win over the Dodgers and became only the second team in history to win three straight series titles. They joined the Yankees who won four straight, 1936-1939 and five in a row 1949-1953.

This was the fourth game decided by a 3-2 score, the A's winning three, Dodgers one.

Campy Campaneris opened the A's first inning with a single off Don Sutton and was forced at second on Bill North's roller to short. North then stole second and went to third when catcher Steve Yeager fired the ball into centerfield. Sal Bando's fly to left scored North.

In the second, Ray Fosse's lead-off homer put the A's ahead 2-0.

The Dodgers bounced back to tie the score in the sixth when Tom Paciorek, batting for Sutton, doubled off Vida Blue. Davey Lopes then walked and both advanced on Bill Buckner's bunt. Jim Wynn got Paciorek home with a fly to

Mike Marshall came in to work the end of the sixth and set down the A's in order.

As Marshall prepared to face lead-off batter Joe Rudi in the seventh, leftfielder Buckner ran into the infield complaining that fans were throwing missiles from the bleachers. After a ten minute delay, Marshall, who had not taken a warmup pitch faced Rudi and threw an inside fastball which Rudi blasted down the leftfield line into the bleachers.

Rollie Fingers protected the lead over the last two innings.
